

Award Recipients

American Council of Learned Societies

In a national competition, the following fellowships and grants were awarded to political scientists by the American Council of Learned Societies, 228 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017.

Fellowships for Research in Humanities and Social Sciences

William F. Harris, assistant professor of political science, University of Pennsylvania. The amendable constitution: a theory of constitution-making.

Marifeli Perez-Stable, assistant professor in politics, economics, and society, State University of New York, College at Old Westbury. Class and Gender in revolutionary Cuba.

Margaret M. Weir, assistant professor of political science, Harvard University. Ideas and interests: the politics of employment in America.

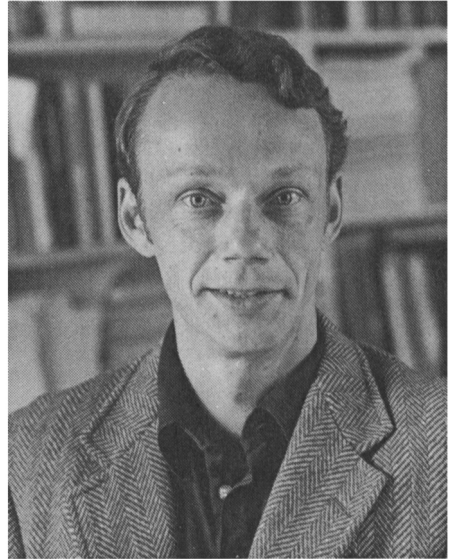

Postdoctoral Research in Humanities and Social Sciences

Peter J. Katzenstein, professor of international studies, Cornell University. Domestic structures and the exercise of power: West Germany and Japan in the postwar world.

Gregory S. Kavka, professor of philosophy and social science, University of California, Irvine. Human shortcomings and the need for government.

Hillel J. Kieval, associate professor of history and international studies, University of Washington. The ritual murder accusation and Jewish-Gentile relations in modern Europe.

Irving L. Markovitz, professor of political science, CUNY, Queens College. African capitalism in comparative perspective: the spirit of African business in Senegal and Ethiopia.

PETER KATZENSTEIN

Richard W. Miller, professor of philosophy, Cornell University. Equality, objectivity, and political justification: the nature of balanced judgment in the face of conflicting needs.

Grants-in-Aid for Postdoctoral Research in Humanities and Social Science

Jill Crystal, assistant professor of political science, University of Michigan. The limits to liberalization: state formation and state control in the Middle East.

Steven M. Neuse, associate professor of political science, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. David E. Lilienthal: vision and reality in pursuit of the public realm.

Jill L. Norgren, professor of government, CUNY, John Jay College. Attorneys in 19th-century Native American litigation.

Fellowship in Chinese Studies for Beginning Doctoral Students

London Del Kirkendall, department of politics, Princeton University.

Postdoctoral Fellowship in East European Studies

People in Political Science

Valerie J. Bunce, associate professor of political science, Northwestern University. The impact of economic austerity on political stability in Yugoslavia and Poland: 1980 to the present.

Dissertation Research and Writing Fellowships in East European Studies

Thomas P. M. Barnett, department of government, Harvard University. An examination and analysis of Eastern Europe's foreign relations with Third World regions within the larger context of Soviet foreign policy.

David L. Bartlett, department of political science, University of California, San Diego. The political economy of banking reform in Hungary.

Anne Henderson Dannenbaum, department of political science, Yale University. The relations between the International Monetary Fund and the three Eastern European countries which have carried out IMF stabilization programs in the 1980s.

Barbara E. Hicks, department of political science, Indiana University. Contemporary environmental politics in Poland.

Jill Irvine, department of government, Harvard University. State-building and nationalism: the Communist Party of Yugoslavia and the Croat question, 1941-1945.

Advanced Graduate Study and Training Fellowships in East European Studies

Gary Lee Geipel, department of political science, Columbia University. Extension of affiliation with the University of Arizona MOSAIC Group to conduct research on German Democratic Republic computer and information policy.

Paula F. Lytle, department of political science, Yale University. Language training in Serbo-Croatian coursework, and research on the 1942-48 period in Yugoslavia.

Ford Foundation Minorities Program

Fellowships have been awarded to 40 predoctoral students and 14 doctoral candidates working on dissertations in the third year of a Ford Foundation program to increase the representation of minorities on the faculties of American colleges and universities. Fellowships include individual stipends and grants to the graduate institutions in lieu of tuition and fees and may extend up to three years. Dissertation awards provide one-year stipends. Among the recipients are the following political scientists:

Francis DuVinage, University of Chicago.

Blake Andree Kessel, University of Maryland.

Carol Miller Swain, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Almaz Shifferaw Zelleke, Harvard University.

International Research & Exchanges Board

Under a special program for collaborative activities, the International Research & Exchanges Board (IREX), 126 Alexander Street, Princeton, NJ 08540-7102, provides short-term support for American scholars who have been formally invited by the USSR or the countries of Eastern Europe to participate in some form of collaborative research. The following political scientist was among 16 recipients in the fall 1987 competition.

Rudolph L. Tokes, department of political science, University of Connecticut.

Travel grants for senior scholars give partial support in the form of round-trip travel to U.S. scholars who have received formal invitation by the Soviets or East Europeans for such activities as consulting or giving seminars in the host country. The following political scientists were among eight recipients of the Senior Scholar Travel Grants in the fall of 1987.

Randolph L. Braham, department of political science, City University of New York: to view Romanian archives on the war crime trials of 1946 relating to the slaughter of North Transylvanian Jews in 1944.

The archival material will be used to produce a new publication and update two republications of books on genocide.

Francis Fukuyama, political science department, RAND Corporation: to consult with colleagues at the Institute of the Far East, USSR Academy of Sciences on the role of the developing world in Soviet foreign policy, specifically the question of linkage of Asia and other regions to the central East-West relationship.

Chun-tu Hsueh, department of government and politics, University of Maryland: to lecture and consult with colleagues at the USSR Institute of Far Eastern Studies on recent developments in China and on Sino-Soviet and Soviet-American relations.

Developmental Fellowships provide grants to faculty, postdoctoral researchers, and Ph.D. candidates for Soviet or East European language and area studies. Among 15 recipients of grants in the winter 1988 selection were the following political scientists:

Robert Wightman Janes, department of government and politics, University of Maryland: Soviet-Finnish Relations and Soviet-Nordic Relations.

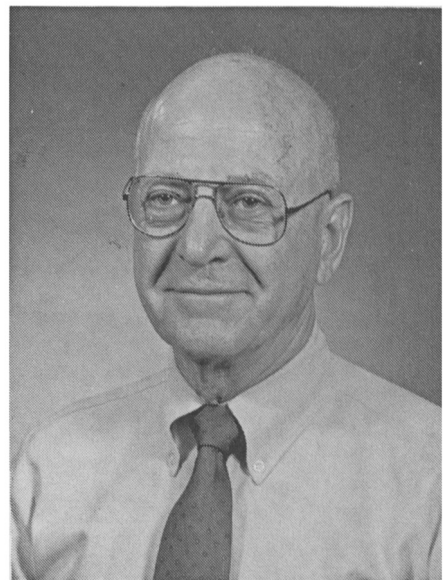

Paula Lytle, department of political science, Yale University: Yugoslav Revolutionary Success: Partisan Appeals and Peasant Mobilization.

National Science Foundation

Under the Visiting Professorships for Women Program of the National Science Foundation, Eileen McDonagh, Northeastern University, has received a grant of $88,135 to research and teach at Radcliffe College for 14 months. Visiting professors serve as mentors and counselors to women entering research careers. McDonagh's project is "Models of Constituency Influences and Issue Configurations: Analysis of Progressive Era Roll Call Voting, House of Representatives."

EILEEN McDONAGH

ABRAHAM HOLTZMAN

Professor of the Year

Abraham Holtzman, professor of political science and public administration at North Carolina State University, has been named a gold medalist in the national Professor of the Year competition sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). He is one of 10 national Gold Medal winners selected from 464 nominees. The award recognizes undergraduate faculty members for their contributions to the lives and careers of students.

In a separate competition, CASE also named Holtzman North Carolina Professor of the Year.

Social Science Research Council

The following political scientists received fellowships from the International Doctoral Research Fellowship Selection Committee for Latin America and the Caribbean.

Carina Perelli, Ph.D. candidate in government, University of Notre Dame, for research in Argentina and Uruguay on the role of the armed forces in political culture.

Eduardo Silva, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, San Diego, for research in Chile on the influence of business groups on authoritarian policy and regime transition.

Kurt Weyland, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University, for research in Brazil in democratization and state autonomy.

The Joint Committee on Latin American Studies selected the following political scientists for Advanced Research Grants.

David Collier, associate professor of political science, University of California, Berkeley, for research on comparative method in Latin American Studies.

Peter McDonough, professor of political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, for research in Chile and El Salvador on Jesuit priests.

Marifeli Perez-Stable, assistant professor of politics, economics, and society, State University of New York, Old Westbury, for research in Cuba on reformist nationalism between revolutions, 1930-1950.

Software Awards

The National Center for Research to Improve Postsecondary Teaching and Learning (NCRIPAL) has announced 14 winners of the 1988 EDUCOM/NCRIPAL Higher Education Software Awards. This year's winners comprise seven "Best Software" products, seven "Distinguished Software" products, and two "Distinguished Curriculum Innovations." In political science, an award was given to Lincoln P. Bloomfield and Allen Moulton of MIT for "CASCON: Computer-Aided System for Analysis of Local Conflicts."

For further information about the development of educational software for undergraduates, write to: NCRIPAL, Suite 240, School of Education Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI 48109-1259; phone (313) 936-2741.

Other Awards and Honors

Ruth Bamberger, Drury College, received the Drury College 1988 Burlington Northern Faculty Achievement Award with a stipend of $1,500 to continue scholarly activities.

David Billeaux, assistant professor, Oklahoma State University, won the prize for the best paper delivered at the Southwestern Political Science Association annual meeting.

Leonard Binder of UCLA is the fourth holder of the Allis Chalmers Distinguished Chair in International Affairs at Marquette University. He will be in residence for the first six weeks of the fall 1988 semester.

John Walton Cotman, Ph.D. candidate at Boston University, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct research in Grenada.

Bob England, associate professor, Oklahoma State University, received the $2,500 Fred Jones award for outstanding teaching.

Katy J. Harriger, assistant professor, department of politics, Wake Forest University, was named the recipient of the Reid-Doyle Prize for Excellence in Teaching at the University's Founders' Day Convocation on February 4, 1988.

Paul Herrnson has been selected as a Lilly Endowment Teaching Fellow for 1988-89. This program enables assistant professors to prepare innovative undergraduate courses in their disciplines while reducing their normal teaching obligations.

Ole R. Holsti, Duke University, is the 1988 recipient of the Nevitt Sanford Award for "distinguished professional contributions to political psychology" from the International Society of Political Psychology.

R. Gordon Hoxie, president and chief executive officer of Center for the Study of the Presidency, received a doctor of humane letters, honoris causa, from Gannon University.

Nancy Kassop of SUNY New Paltz has won a Best Paper Award from the Pennsylvania Political Science Association for "President Johnson and Gulf of Tonkin Incident: An Example of Presidential Prerogative Power."

Paul Light, University of Minnesota, has received the fifth D. B. Hardeman Prize for the best book on the modern Congress, Artful Work: The Politics of Social Security (Random House, 1985).

Cecelia Lynch, Columbia University, has received the Alice Paul Dissertation Proposal Award from the Women's Caucus for Political Science for "The Interwar Anglo-American Peace Movement (1919-1939) and Its Role in the Development of Norms of Political Discourse."

Martha A. Myers and Susette M. Talarico, University of Georgia, received the 1988 Outstanding Scholarship Award of the Crime and Delinquency Division of the Society for the Study of Social Problems for their book, The Social Contexts of Criminal Sentencing (New York: Springer-Verlag, 1987).

RUTH BAMBERGER

Dianne M. Pinderhughes and Edward A. Kolodziej, of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, have been designated as University Scholars in recognition of their outstanding scholarly contributions as members of the faculty of the University of Illinois.

Stanley Vanagunas, professor of public administration at Arkansas State University, has received a Fulbright Lectureship

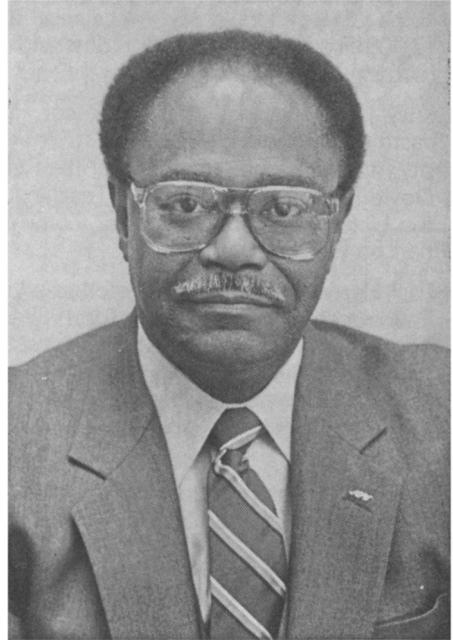

KATY J. HARRIGER

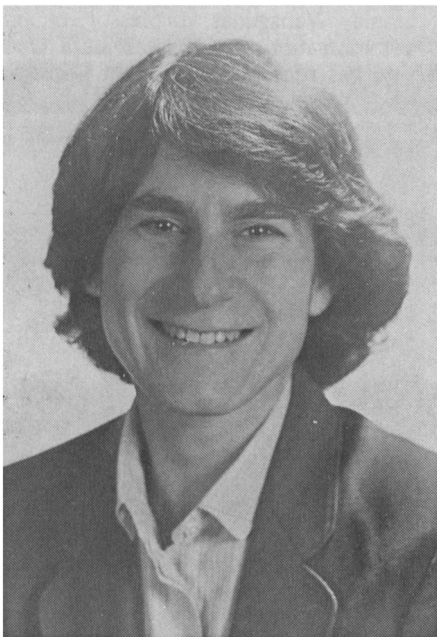

People in Political Science

OLE R. HOLSTI

EDDIE N. WILLIAMS

NANCY KASSOP

to the USSR for the spring semester 1989.

Franz Von Sauer, associate professor, Oklahoma State University, has received a Fulbright scholarship for research and teaching in Venezuela.

Eddie N. Williams, president, Joint Center for Political Studies, and former APSA Congressional Fellow, has received a grant of $330,000 from the MacArthur Foundation as a 1988 MacArthur Fellow.

In Memoriam

Maung Maung Gyi

We mark with sorrow the unexpected death on July 2, 1988, of Maung Maung Gyi, professor of political science, who had retired one short month previously, upon completion of twenty-one years of devoted service on the Bates Faculty.

Born in Burma in 1920, Gyi was educated there in English-speaking schools and