ZYG- or ZYGO [Gk, fr. zygon]

yoke: connecting in the manner of a yoke; joining

Traditional religions, which have transmitted wisdom about what is of essential value and ultimate meaning as a guide for human living, were expressed in terms of the best understandings of their times about human nature, society, and the world. Religious thought and practice in our time, however, has not drawn similarly on the modern sciences, which have superceded many ancient forms of understanding. The journal Zygon attempts to explore how insights from the world's religious heritage can be yoked together (zygon) with knowledge from the contemporary sciences, so as to light the way in modern humans' searches for life's meaning and general moral direction.

Religion & Literature

R&L is the forum for an on-going discussion of the relations between two crucial human concerns, the religious impulse and the literary forms of any era, place, or language.

We publish three times a year: four scholarly articles in each issue, as well as review essays and book notices. Each year one special issue is devoted to a single theme or area:

1984: An investigation of sacred experience and word in Jewish traditions, edited by Elie Wiesel.

1985: The role of language, literature and the imagination in the life and writings of Simone Weil.

Forthcoming: Religious inspiration and literary expression in Islam, past and present, edited by Herbert Mason.

R&L (and its predecessor NDEJ) have published work by:

M.H. Abrams	Stanley Hauerwas
Thomas J.J. Altizer	Hugh Kenner
Felicia Bonaparte	Joseph Mazzeo
Robert MacAfee Brown	Sallie McFague
Wallace Fowle	J. Hillis Miller

— and many other thinkers concerned with the intersection between language and the ineffable.

Religion and Literature is a key source for anyone interested in these expressions of the human spirit.
