Dear Editor

I am a Canadian reader who is appreciative of the information provided by your journal. Since I teach Native Indian students in a small town in the province of British Columbia, I am interested in the many parallels between the educational experiences of Australian and Canadian aboriginal peoples.

Currently I am completing my doctoral dissertation, which focuses on differences between Native Indian and non-Native students as they participated in instructional dialogue.

I would like to contact anyone interested in conducting comparative classroom-based research (Canadian/Australian aboriginal peoples) in the area of language use. If any of your readers share similar interests I would be delighted to hear from them.

My address is:

Angela Ward

Thank you for giving me a glimpse of what is happening in Australian classrooms.

Yours sincerely

-sgd- Angela Ward
