

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Christopher Layne is Professor, and holder of the Mary Julia and George R. Jordan Professorship of International Affairs at Texas A & M University's George H. W. Bush School of Government and Public Service. He is the author of The Peace of Illusions: American Grand Strategy from 1940 to the Present (Cornell, 2006) and (with Bradley A. Thayer), American Empire: A Debate (Routledge, 2006).

Campbell Craig is professor of international relations at the University of Southampton, where he lectures on US foreign policy, nuclear and cold war history, and international relations theory. His books include The Atomic Bomb and the Origins of the Cold War (Yale University Press, 2008), with Sergey Radchenko, and America's Cold War: A New History (Harvard University Press, forthcoming), with Fredrik Logevall. He is also editor of The Nuclear Revolution and the Post-Cold War World (Stanford University Press, forthcoming).

Paul K. MacDonald is a post-doctoral fellow at the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs at the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. He received his PhD from Columbia University in 2007. He has published articles in International Security and the American Political Science Review.

Martijn Konings has a PhD from York University (Toronto) and is currently a researcher at the University of Amsterdam. He has co-edited (with Leo Panitch) American Empire and the Political Economy of Global Finance (Palgrave, 2008) and has articles (published or forthcoming) in the Review of International Political Economy, Research in Political Economy, Historical Materialism and Contemporary Politics. He is currently working on a book on the sources of American financial power. E-mail: koningsm@gmail.com

Mark Beeson is a Professor of International Politics at the University of Birmingham. His latest books are Regionalism, Globalization and East Asia: Politics, Security and Economic Development (Palgrave, 2007) and the edited collection Bush and Asia: America's Evolving Relations with East Asia (Routledge, 2006).

David Rapkin is an Associate Professor at the University of Nebraska, where he has served as department chair and graduate chair. He has also been a Visiting Professor at Tsukuba University in Japan 1988–90 and 1996–98. His major research and teaching interests are in global political economy, with an emphasis on East Asia. His recent articles have appeared in New Political Economy, World Development, International Interactions, and The World Economy. He can be contacted at drapkin2@unl.edu.

Daniel Braaten is a PhD candidate in the Political Science Department at the University of Nebraska. His dissertation research focuses on how corporate social responsibility influences human rights practices. He can be reached at: dannybraaten12@yahoo.com.

Ruth Deyermund is Lecturer in War Studies in the Department of War Studies, Kings College, London. Her most recent publication is Security and Sovereignty in the Former Soviet Union (Boulder, CO: Lynne Rienner, 2008).

Antje Wiener (PhD Carleton 96, MA Free University of Berlin 89) is a Professor of Politics and International Relations at the University of Bath. Her publications include The Invisible Constitution of Politics: Contested Norms and International Encounters, Cambridge University Press, 2008; Theories of European Integration: Past, Present and Future, Oxford University Press, 2003 (with T. Diez); The Social Construction of Europe, SAGE, 2001 (with T. Christiansen and K. E. Joergensen), and 'European' Citizenship Practice – Building Institutions of a Non-State, Westview Press, 1998. Among others she is an associate editor of the European Political Science Review (EPSR) and serves on the boards of the International Studies Review and the German Journal for International Relations (ZIB).

Amir Lupovici is a post-doctoral fellow at the Davis Institute for International Relations at the Hebrew University. He completed his PhD at the Hebrew University in 2008. His research focuses on the connections between identity and security.

James Brassett is RCUK Fellow and Assistant Professor in the Department of Politics and International Studies, University of Warwick. His work on global ethics has been published in Ethics and International Affairs, European Journal of International Relations, International Studies Quarterly, Millennium, and Review of International Studies.