CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

Walter L. Arnstein is Chairman of the Department of History at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He has published The Bradlaugh Case: A Study in Late Victorian Opinion and Politics, also Britain Yesterday and Today. He is currently working on a study of mid-Victorian Protestant-Catholic rivalry.

John W. Auld is an Associate Professor of History at California State College, Dominguez Hills. He is engaged in research on Thomas Burt and "Lib-Lab" politics.

Robert C. Braddock is an Assistant Professor of History at Saginaw Valley College, Michigan, and has published an article entitled "The Character and Composition of the Duke of Northumberland's Army." He is currently preparing a study of the early years of Mary Tudor's reign.

Joyce Brown is an instructor in Economics at Modesto Junior College. Her doctoral thesis (for the University of Sheffield) will compare the political activities of trade unions in the United States and Great Britain from 1889 to 1914.

Bentley B. Gilbert, Professor of History at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, is the author of The Evolution of National Insurance, British Social Policy, and Britain Since 1918. He has also edited The Heart of the Empire. He is currently working on a biography of David Lloyd George.

Ernest D. Jones is a temporary lecturer in the Department of History at the University of Western Australia. He is currently working on the peasantry in the East Midlands during the 13th century.

Linda W. Rosenzweig is a Staff Associate of the Social Studies Curriculum Center at Carnegie-Mellon University. She has produced the Individual and Group Activity Kit for The Shaping of Western Society, and has also published a teacher's guide for The Shaping of Western Society. Her current research project is centered on techniques to promote cognitive moral development through history curriculum.
