The U.S. financial crisis, which followed from the downturn of the U.S. real estate crisis in 2008, was rapidly transmitted to the whole international financial systems. This financial crisis has triggered a strong economic recession for several developed and emerging countries. The abrupt transmission and the magnitude of this crisis shows that, in spite of the recent introduction of several sophisticated developments in finance and accounting, additional protections of the financial system and economies from external and unexpected crises and crashes are still to be discovered and implemented.

It seems necessarily to develop new tools and innovative methodologies to improve trading, financing decisions, corporate governance, risk management, and the valuation of risk premia. Moreover, other approaches to finance also need to be developed; those methods include, without being restricted to, microfinance, corporate responsibility, and ethics in finance through managerial methods leading to a responsible and sustainable development.

This international conference aims at allowing academics and professionals together to discuss the main consequences of this crisis and their own experiences, and also at providing an opportunity to exchange and confront innovative and thought-provoking ideas on the issues above.

This international conference includes plenary sessions and parallel sessions. It also schedules a separate Ph.D. workshop and poster sessions.

EDITORIAL POLICY

Macroeconomic Dynamics publishes research of the highest theoretical, empirical or quantitative sophistication. Papers of high quality are welcomed from all areas of advanced macroeconomics and allied fields, so long as the research is founded in a rigorous scientific approach. Major advances in macroeconomics without immediate policy applications also are accepted, if they show potential for application in the future. Occasional book reviews, software reviews, announcements, conference proceedings and interviews are published.

An electronic version of the journal is published just prior to the paper version at journals.cambridge.org/mdy. Access to the full-text articles of the electronic version will be limited to institutional subscribers of the hard copy version of the journal, with access available to all online users at that institution's registered domain. Tables of Contents, abstracts, searching and alerting services will remain free of charge. To view the full text of Macroeconomic Dynamics, you will need to use the Adobe Acrobat Reader software. If you do not have a copy already, you can get it free of charge. Just follow the link from our Cambridge Journals Online home page, download it, and install it as a plug-in helper application for your browser.
