Igor Stravinsky

The Rite of Spring

SKETCHES 1911-1913

In the winter of 1911-12, Igor Stravinsky and Maurice Ravel visited the Italian town of Varese, found in a stationer's an exercise book and, tempted by the quality of its paper, bought one copy each. In his copy, Stravinsky composed one of the key works of the 20th century. By permission of its present owner, M. André Meyer, this fascinating document has been reproduced in a magnificent facsimile that preserves exactly the appearance of the original with its tinted paper and different coloured inks. There is a preface by Francois Lésure and an introductory essay by Robert Craft, who provides a detailed commentary to the sketches in an appendix that includes Stravinsky letters and an article by Stravinsky on the original Nijinsky choreography.
