Emphasizing the 20th Century...

Business Enterprise in American History

Mansel G. Blackford and K. Austin Kerr

Both of The Ohio State University

About 350 pages • paper • Just published

The new Blackford/Kerr survey develops two clear themes: the history of the firm and government-business relations. The authors cover all periods from the colonial era to the present, with an emphasis on the twentieth century and unparalleled coverage of the post-1945 years.

Assuming no background in history, Blackford and Kerr define terms when introduced and follow a straightforward chronological arrangement. The unusually engaging narrative incorporates many examples plus more detailed studies of well-known firms such as ITT, DuPont, General Motors, and Wang Laboratories.

Image Worlds

Corporate Identities at General Electric,
1890–1930

David E. Nye

General Electric was one of the first modern industrial corporations to use photographs and other media resources to create images of itself. In Image Worlds, David Nye studies symbols, intentional signs, and photographs as well as the history of institutional and technological development, identifying the five “image markets” that GE sought to organize and address.

“This deceptively simple study is broadly interdisciplinary, well-researched, and powerfully integrated. Image Worlds represents an exciting new approach to business history that imaginatively exploits visual documents and, by transcending the traditional disciplinary boundaries, provides a pioneering example of how to place the modern corporation in its broadest social and cultural context.” — Reese Jenkins, Director and Editor, *Thomas A. “A major event in American social historiography.”

“Portrait of an Empire Builder”:
THE JAMES J. HILL PAPERS

Edited by: W. Thomas White, Robert M. Frame III, and Kathryn J. Gutzmann

Railroad man, industrialist, experimental farmer, pioneer, philanthropist, and “Empire Builder”—in many ways James Jerome Hill played a pivotal role in the economic and social life of nineteenth-century America. By opening new areas for settlement and new avenues for trade, his Great Northern Railway literally changed the face of the continent. A man of many interests, Hill also became an integral figure in the development of mining industries, ran model experimental farms, and was a major contributor to educational, religious, and charitable organizations. Fortunately, Hill kept a meticulous record of his many business and private dealings, and equally fortunate, these remarkably comprehensive and well-preserved records are now available in a convenient microfilm edition.

Hill wrote constantly, inquiring about railroading, markets, politics, colonization and settlement, and a host of other matters. His letters are among the most extensive papers of any major American economic leader of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. This new microfilm collection contains Hill's most substantive outgoing correspondence from 1866 to 1916—an invaluable source of information for researchers interested in the history of business, transportation, settlement, Indian affairs, immigration, philanthropy, and many other subjects.

“With the publication of the letterbooks of James J. Hill, scholars now have available the most complete collection of the private papers of a major American economic leader of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Hill's career illuminates not merely the transportation and industrial development of a region—the upper Northwest and the Pacific Northwest—but of the entire nation. This is a major event in the development of American social historiography.”

Newcomen Awards in Business History

For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year the Society will award a prize of $300 and a scroll. For the best article published in the Business History Review during the previous year by a graduate student or a recent Ph.D. who has not published a book in business history, the Society will award a special prize of $150 and a scroll. Criteria for selection include originality, value, breadth and interest of contribution, quality of research materials and methods, and quality of presentation.

Winners will be selected by a panel of judges consisting of the editors and the members of the editorial board of the Business History Review, none of whom shall be eligible to receive a prize. The awards are administered by the editorial office of the Review. No special prize will be awarded in years when, in the opinion of the judges, no eligible article suitable for the prize was published, and no person may be awarded both prizes in any one year.

Thomas Newcomen Book Award in Business History

The Newcomen Society of the United States, in cooperation with the Business History Review, will award in 1988 the ninth in a series of triennial prizes consisting of $1,000 and a scroll for the best book on the history of business published in the United States between 1985 and 1987. "Business history" is defined in its broadest sense to include not only the history of firms or industries, but books tracing interactions of business leaders, analyses of business philosophy or behavior, and studies of the adjustment of businesses and businesspeople to their economic, political, and social environments. Criteria for selection will include contribution to knowledge, depth of analysis, soundness of reasoning, clarity of style and organization, and general readability and format.

Judges for the 1988 award will be announced at an appropriate time by the Harvard Business School and the Newcomen Society of the United States.
