Zygon

Journal of RELIGION & SCIENCE

ZYGON represents a unique attempt to interpret and revitalize the religious dimension of life in terms of contemporary scientific understandings. At a time when "facts" and "values" have become dangerously disjointed, Zygon seeks a symbiotic unification of the two, a "yoking" (zygon) necessary if human civilization is to survive and evolve in a scientific-technological age. In working toward this goal Zygon publishes papers from a wide range of disciplines, including such authors as natural scientists Victor Ferkiss, Lawrence Kohlberg, and Edward O. Wilson; social scientists Irvin Laszlo, Holmes Rolston III, and Charles Sherover; philosophers Philip Hefner, Richard Gelwick, and J. Robert Nelson; theologians Philip Hefner, Richard Gelwick, and J. Robert Nelson; and cent and upcoming theme issues include Sociobiology, Values, and Religion; Nature, Mind, and Method; Systems Theory, Self, and World; Science and Religion and the Future of Michael Polanyi; and Private Interests, Public Good, and the Future of the Environment.

Founded in 1966 by Ralph Wendell Burhoe, recipient of the 1980 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion, Zygon is now edited by Karl E. Peters, Associate Professor of Philosophy and Religion at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida.

ZYGON is published on a quarterly basis. Individual subscriptions are $17 for one year; overseas subscribers must add $1.50 per year to cover extra postage.

Studies Review

Religious

A publication like Religious Studies Review has been needed for a long time in our field. We now have in the Review a thoroughly responsible organ dedicated to reviewing the critical books in the field of religion and related disciplines—it is high time and many of us are very, very grateful for it.

Sally McFague, Dean, Vanderbilt Divinity School

Religious Studies Review is a sign of maturity in the discipline, and a guide to the wealth of resources now available. Its scholarly approach and critical stance provide perspective in an area tempted to live beyond its means.

*Joseph C. McLelland, Dean, Faculty of Religious Studies
McGill University*

Religious Studies Review dramatically documents the extent to which American scholarship in religion has come of age after having achieved corporate self-consciousness only so recently. In the Review Essays each issue of RSR bristles with material relevant for anyone concerned with religious studies in its wider scope, while the Notes on Recent Publications, organized according to topic areas, provide prompt contact with the stream of books and monographs that continue to emerge from presses throughout the world. The listing of recently completed Dissertations in Religion is an added bonus.

*Robert A. Kraft, Chairperson, Department of Religious Studies
University of Pennsylvania*

I have become an enthusiastic, regular reader of Religious Studies Review. It keeps me abreast of scholarly developments and current literature in my own and in other fields in a helpful, readable way.

*Robert T. Handy, Academic Dean and Professor of Church History
Union Seminary, New York, and Adjunct Professor of Religion
Columbia University*
