Scientism in Chinese Thought, 1900-1950

by D. W. Y. Kwok

An account of the subtle and far-reaching intellectual conversion to scientism that colored the transformation of China in the twentieth century. The part that this intellectual phenomenon played in a revolutionary China carries serious implications for the direction of the new culture envisaged by its contemporary champions. $6.75

Chinese Civilization and Bureaucracy

by Etienne Balazs; edited by Arthur F. Wright

Preface by John K. Fairbank and Arthur F. Wright

"The translation of Dr. Balazs's text is done with expertness, assurance, and elegance . . . it is above all a pleasure to observe enthusiastic and skillful scholarship range, unfettered, over a wide variety of diverse aspects of classical Chinese culture . . . a work in which one can browse with real delight and appreciation."—Virginia Quarterly Review. $8.50

The Chinese in Philippine Life, 1850-1898

by Edgar Wickberg

In a book particularly relevant to current events in Southeast Asia, Edgar Wickberg details the typical development of an overseas Chinese community. How do the Chinese gain their tremendous economic power? How do they maintain their resistance to cultural and social assimilation? "Wickberg's study breaks new ground. In terms of historical scholarship, it is superior to anything in the literature on the overseas Chinese of any country."—G. William Skinner. $7.50

The Civil Service of Pakistan

Bureaucracy in a New Nation
by Henry Frank Goodnow

"Gives a clear picture of the organization of the civil service and governmental operations, and it explains how the bureaucrats have been able to become such a powerful force in everyday operation of the country. By inference it also explains why so many of the emergent nations have been unable to develop much beyond chaos."—American Bar Association Journal. $6.75

The Ili Crisis

A Study of Sino-Russian Diplomacy 1878 to 1881

By IMMANUEL C. Y. HSÜ, University of California at Santa Barbara. Dr. Hsü provides the historical perspective for understanding Sino-Russian tensions in the border areas. He investigates the reasons for Russian occupation of Ili (Kuldja) in Sinkiang, in light of the Russian advance into Central Asia in mid-19th century and traditional Anglo-Russian rivalry. He examines the historical, strategic, and emotional reasons for Chinese determination to recover the area. The interaction of foreign and domestic politics and the crucial role of Britain in the crisis are treated in detail. 5 figures. $7.20

Japan's Economic Expansion

By G. C. ALLEN, University of London. Using information obtained from recent research in Japan, Professor Allen examines the growth of Japan during the last decade into one of the world's great industrial nations. He analyzes Japanese economic planning and the effects of government policy, and describes the development of industry, agriculture, finance and foreign trade, evaluating changes in industrial organization, technical methods and monetary policy. R.I.I.A. $8.00

The Glass Curtain Between Asia and Europe

A Symposium on the Historical Encounters and the Changing Attitudes of the People of the East and the West

Edited by RAGHAVAN IYER, Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions. This important collection of essays aims to make readers aware of the deep historical and psychological barriers to East-West understanding—of what Dr. Iyer calls the Glass Curtain between Asia and Europe, “a distorting sense of distance, if not actually of alienation.” The distinguished contributors to this volume have produced, from many points of view, an informative and thought-provoking inquiry. $6.75

War and Peace in South East Asia

By PETER LYON, London School of Economics. A small, expert study group has met recently at Chatham House to discuss solutions to South East Asia's grave problems. This timely, critical examination of those solutions is by one of the members of that study group. He presents his own evaluations of the proposals rather than a consensus. During the course of the discussions the group has analyzed the major issues and interests and has thrown up solutions including neutralization, great power agreements, and a regional economic development plan. $1.55

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF FUKUZAWA YUKICHI

Translated by Eiichi Kiyooka, this book tells about the miraculous transition of Japan from a feudal to a modern nation-state—all in the short duration of this one man's lifetime. Fukuzawa's accomplishments were many: it was he who first introduced the teaching of history, world geography, physical sciences, and military science to the country as well as founding the now famous Keio University. By 1901, when Fukuzawa died, the major elements of Westernization had been firmly established in Japan. Coming soon $7.50

THE MANYŌSHŪ The Nippon Gakujutsu Shinōkai Translation of One Thousand Poems

With the texts in Romaji and a new foreword by Donald Keene, these 1,000 poems reflecting Japanese life and civilization of the seventh and eighth centuries are indeed "unsurpassed among 'Manyōshū' translations in [their] combination of quality and quantity."—New York Times Book Review $12.50

SU TUNG-P'O Selections from a Sung Dynasty Poet

Translated by Burton Watson, these selections record the poet's experiences, express his griefs and joys, and paint vivid word pictures of people and scenery. As the major poet of the Sung dynasty, Su Tung-p'o expresses a way of life—values and interests—which has much in common with that of modern Western man. So it is that this poetry can have so much appeal to readers of today. $3.75

CHINA'S WARTIME FINANCE AND INFLATION, 1937-1945

By ARTHUR N. YOUNG

A companion volume to China and the Helping Hand, 1937-1945, here is a comprehensive description and analysis of China's fiscal affairs during the war against Japan. Mr. Young, Financial Adviser to China from 1929 to 1947, was a high-level participant in these events and his private papers are, in many instances, the most complete source material available. Harvard East Asian Series, 20. $10.00

AFTER IMPERIALISM

The Search for a New Order in the Far East, 1921-1931

By AKIRA IRIYE

In the first extensive and systematic study of Far Eastern international relations during the significant years of the 1920's, the author develops a framework within which the fundamental changes in individual foreign policies can be examined and understood in relation to the larger international problems of the time. Harvard East Asian Series, 22. $9.50

Religion and Progress in Modern Asia

Edited by ROBERT N. BELLAH

The author and nine other contributors—most of them Asian—evaluate the cultural-religious aspect of modernization. Their papers consider problems of the relation of religion to progress in the Philippines, India, the Arab world, Indonesia, Ceylon, and Japan. Several contributors and the editor reflect on solutions to the “identity crisis” that has been brought about by rapid political, economic, and social change. $6.95

THE QUEST FOR MODERNITY
IN ASIA AND AFRICA

Edited by CLIFFORD GEERTZ

This collection of studies—the work of eminent scholars in sociology, anthropology, political science, economics, and law—is the first publication sponsored by the Committee for the Comparative Study of New Nations, founded in 1959. Among the problems examined are: conflict between tradition and innovation; national integration and cultural diversity; the process of political socialization; the role of law in development; and the role of education. $6.95

"To have lived through the transition stage of modern Japan makes a man feel preternaturally old; for here he is in modern times, . . . and yet he can himself distinctly remember the Middle Ages."—BASIL HALL CHAMBERLAIN.

The Modernization of Japan

"The modernization of Japan is a phenomenon which cannot be viewed casually by any serious observer. Whether one looks upon it as some Westerners have done as the first phase in the rise of a new "peril from the East" or, on the contrary, as a miraculous example of progress from out of an Oriental Middle Ages; whether one sees it as the Japanese themselves have done as the triumph of their unique national will against great odds or as the dark story of autocratic domination leading to imperialist war, the observations are highly colored and strongly lined. For the observer who would maintain his impartiality, the facts of the last hundred years or so of Japanese history are available in great abundance and in rich detail. Yet the efforts to find meaning in these facts have been bafflingly varied."—John Whitney Hall, vol. 1*

The State and Economic Enterprise in Japan

No. 2, "Studies in the Modernization of Japan"

Edited by W. W. LOCKWOOD. Dealing with the extraordinary economic modernization that has been taking place in Japan since 1868, this is an analysis of Japan's historical opportunities and how men used them. This study, like volume I of the Series, Changing Japanese Attitudes Toward Modernization, edited by Marius Jansen (1965), was prepared under the auspices of the Association for Asian Studies.

TERRITORIAL CLAIMS IN THE SINO-SOVIET CONFLICT

Documents and Analysis

By Dennis J. Doolin. Recent evidence indicates that the Sino-Soviet dispute was going on several years before it broke into the open. The thirty documents of this study, some unavailable in English translation before this, are taken from a variety of sources and cover a two-year period, up to the beginning of 1965. The documents include statements by Soviet and Chinese leaders as well as newspaper editorials and transcripts of Soviet and Chinese radio broadcasts. Published by the Hoover Institution. $2.50

THE STEEL INDUSTRY IN COMMUNIST CHINA

By Yuan-li Wu. In light of their recent successful explosion of a nuclear device, Communist China's economic potential has taken on a new meaning. This timely study offers a comprehensive analysis both of the Chinese steel industry and of the efficiency of Chinese performance in economic and industrial planning in general. The first major study in the English language of the Chinese steel industry, this work explores its development, its meaningfulness, and its relation to the index of modern industry output. Published for the Hoover Institution by Frederick A. Praeger, Inc., New York. $7.50

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND THE USE OF ENERGY RESOURCES IN COMMUNIST CHINA

By Yuan-li Wu. This is the first comprehensive survey of Communist China's energy resources and the role they have played in China's economic growth during the critical years since the Communist takeover in 1949. The author has compiled exhaustive data on Communist China's coal and electrical power industries, as well as on other energy resources that supply heat, light, and power. He examines their patterns of distribution and their contributions to national income, and he concludes with an analysis of the successes and failures of Communist planning in these vitally important areas. *Published for the Hoover Institution by Frederick A. COMMUNIST CHINA

The Politics of Student Opposition

Translated with an introduction by Dennis J. Doolin. Communist Chinese students have written, in this monograph, some of the most outspoken criticism of life in Communist China ever to reach the West. Now available in English translation, these expressions of political thought in Communist China reveal both the fears and valor of the authors. Valuable for showing that a surprising depth of political insight is possible even in Communist China, these criticisms have an extraordinary and poignant interest even as human documents. Published by the Hoover Institution. $1.50

ANCIENT IRAQ

by Georges Roux

Many books and articles have been published on the various aspects of Mesopotamian history, but none, until now, has attempted to draw a complete and coherent picture of Mesopotamia's development from prehistoric times to the dawn of the Christian era. Clearly written, thoroughly documented, and illustrated throughout with photographs, maps, and diagrams, Ancient Iraq is the first definitive political, cultural, and economic history of the remarkable past of a fascinating vital center of the ancient world. Georges Roux, a noted scholar of ancient Oriental languages and civilizations, has spent more than twenty years in the Near East.

They Came to Japan

Compiled and annotated by MICHAEL COOPER, S. J. It has frequently been said that, if they could be brought together, the letters, diaries and other writings of European visitors to Japan during the 16th and 17th centuries would present a fascinating picture of the Japanese scene at that time. This is the first book in English to offer such an overall picture. It contains observations on many aspects of Japanese life—architecture, etiquette, the tea ceremony, dress, food, housing, art, literature, and Buddhism, to name a few. $8.50

The Rate and Pattern of Industrial Growth in Communist China

By Kang Chao

The Chinese Communist government places a high priority on the development of industry in its national economic plans. Anxious to show advancement, it published gross values of industrial production for the years prior to 1961 and corresponding indexes. Many of these data are biased and unreliable.

In this book Kang Chao carefully reconstructs two sets of industrial production indexes that are more meaningful and reliable. He also lays out the statistical procedures necessary to construct new indexes that reflect fundamental economic facts in contrast to official statistics. His approach represents an excellent model for others to follow in index-making for countries with limited output statistics and production cost data.

The appendix contains valuable tables on China's industrial output, commodity by commodity, as well as on industry employment, wages, and prices. These tables were compiled from diverse and scattered sources and represent the most comprehensive compilation for that sector ever to appear except for the classified statistical documents of the Chinese Communist government.
