

Social History of Medicine

The Journal of the Society for the Social History of Medicine

Social History of Medicine is concerned with all aspects of health, illness, and medical treatment in the past. It is committed to publishing work on the social history of medicine from a variety of disciplines. The journal offers its readers substantive and lively articles on a variety of themes, critical assessments of archives and sources, conference reports, up-to-date information on research in progress, a discussion point on topics of current controversy and concern, review articles, and wide-ranging book reviews. A recent special issue was entitled, The Year 1000: Medical Practice at the End of the First Millennium. Full details about this and the journal can be found at:
