

World Eco-Crisis International Organizations in Response

Edited by David A. Kay and Eugene B. Skolnikoff
Introduction by Maurice Strong

This is the first book to analyze the impact and implications of the environmental crisis for international organizations. World Eco-Crisis takes up the issues faced at the UN Conference on the Human Environment, often by Conference participants. (Reproduces the Spring 1972 issue of International Organization.)

A Report on Global Ecological Problems

Sponsored by the Institute of Ecology

This report, the work of a group of fifty top-ranking scientists, was prepared to transmit the ecologist's view of global ecological problems to the Stockholm Conference. Discussed are issues concerning population and resources management, pollution, chemical and biological pest control, crop and habitat management, land and aquatic food sources, eutrophication of land and water, and the effects of human activity upon element cycles.

Water Resources Law and Policy in the Soviet Union

Edited by Irving K. Fox

The management of water resources has just become a subject of international concern. Until now, a text—in English—delineating Soviet water law and policy has not been available. This volume fills that gap in the literature, and sheds new light on problems relating to U.S. water assets. (University of Wisconsin Water Resources Studies, V. 1)

Soviet Prison Camp Speech

A Survivor's Glossary

Supplemented by terms from the works of A. I. Solzhenitsyn

Compiled by Meyer Galler and Harlan E. Marquess

This glossary, the only one of its kind, will be of significant interest and value to Russian reading historians and political scientists, and to all who read recent Russian literature—especially the underground genre. The more than one thousand words and expressions in the glossary, listed alphabetically in Russian Cyrillic, are defined in both Cyrillic and in English. Also included is an explanation of the glossary's origin and an introduction which places Soviet prison camp speech in historical and linguistic perspective.

Africa and the West Intellectual Responses to European Culture

Edited by Philip D. Curtin

In this new volume, Curtin's latest effort, he presents seven essays which together help to reconstruct Africans' views of the West over the past hundred years. The work is one of intellectual history, approached not only by historians but by anthropologists and literary critics as well. Contributors include James W. Fernandez, Wyatt MacGaffey, Jean Herskovits, G. Wesley Johnson, Jr., Leo Spitzer, Harold Scheub, and Curtin.

The Anatomy of Influence

Decision Making in International Organization

by Robert W. Cox and Harold K. Jacobson

The Anatomy of Influence is a study of eight specialized international agencies: ITU, ILO, UNESCO, WHO, IAEA, IMF, GATT, and UNCTAD. The structure, function, and pattern of influence in each of these organizations is analyzed in detail within a theoretical and comparative overview provided by the editors. The book covers the period from 1945 through 1970, and gives historical dimension to the examination of political processes in the agencies. All of these organizations were found to share a common pattern of influence in which nationals of western states with competitive polities predominate. $15.00

The Dimensions of the Past

Materials, Problems, and Opportunities for Quantitative Work in History

edited by Val R. Lorwin and Jacob M. Price

The thirteen papers in this innovative collection were designed to increase awareness in the historical profession of the possibilities and problems of quantitative work in fields other than U.S. history. The contributors, all leading figures in their fields, confronted four major issues: the kinds of quantitative data available for the problems, periods, and areas under discussion; the chief uses already made of these data; the most important problems in utilizing such data; and the most promising directions for further work, both substantive and methodological. As a result, this volume provides a remarkably wide bibliographical, methodological, and critical guide to current quantitative work in European, Asian, and Latin American History. $17.50

World Handbook of Political and Social Indicators

second edition

by Charles L. Taylor and Michael C. Hudson

This new, completely revised edition of the World Handbook is one of the most complete collections of cross-national attribute and event data available to scholars of comparative and international politics. Included are series measuring political performance and structure, aspects of external relations, economic development and differentiation, demographic characteristics, and other social phenomena for the 136 countries which had one million or more population in 1965 or were members of the UN by 1968. Mr. Taylor discusses the analysis of the data and suggests uses to be made of them in the final chapter of the book. $15.00

Regimes and Oppositions

edited by Robert A. Dahl

Seven political scientists who are specialists on individual countries or areas have collaborated with Robert Dahl in this second volume on political oppositions, which examines countries where opposition is not expressed in varieties of political parties characteristic of Western democracies. Chapters on the Soviet Union (Frederick C. Barghoorn), Eastern Europe and Czechoslovakia (H. Gordon Skilling), single-party stages of tropical Africa (William J. Foltz), Spain (Juan J. Linz), Latin America (Robert H. Dix), India (Rajni Kothari), and Japan (Michael Leiserson) are introduced in an analytical discussion by Mr. Dahl. Here is a detailed examination of the almost infinite variety of forms in which political interests are expressed and conflicts resolved in nonpolyarchal political settings. $15.00

GUIDELINES FOR PROJECT EVALUATION

In almost all developing countries the national Government plays an important role in formulating and evaluating investment projects while pursuing policies that are in the national interest. Therefore, guidelines are needed.

This publication representing the cumulative experience of UNIDO in the methodology and practice of national benefit-cost analysis for industrial project preparation and evaluation, sets forth just such guidelines.
