

Notes on Contributors

John R. Searle

John R. Searle is Professor of Philosophy at the University of California at Berkeley. He is author of many distinguished works on the philosophy of language and mind.

Luke Purshouse

Temporary Lecturer in Philosophy at St John's College Cambridge who has researched interests in accounts of emotions and their rational appraisal and has recently completed a doctoral dissertation on the subject.

Christopher Cordner

Lecturer in Philosophy at the University of Melbourne. His book Ethical Encounter will soon be published by Palgrave.

Thom Brooks

Recently received his MA from University College Dublin. He is now a doctoral candidate at the University of Sheffield. His dissertation is on Hegel's political philosophy.

Roberto Casati

A researcher at the Nicod Institut of CNRS, Paris. His most recent works are The Discovery of the Shadow (Little Brown/Knopf) and Parts and Places (MIT Press, with Achille C. Varzi).

Achille C. Varzi

Associate Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University. His most recent works are An Essay in Universal Semantics (Kluwer) and Parts and Places (MIT Press, with Roberto Casati).

Jeremy Randel Koons

Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the American University of Beirut. His primary research interests are in ethical theory and epistemology. His article 'Do Normative Facts Need to Explain?' recently appeared in Pacific Philosophical Quarterly.

Hilary W. Putnam

Cogan University Professor Emeritus at Harvard University. His books include Reason, Truth and History, Realism with a Human Face, Words and Life, Pragmatism and The Threefold Cord: Body and World.

Notes on Contributors

Graham Oppy

Associate Professor of Philosophy at Monash University. His research interests lie in philosophy of religion, philosophy of science, metaphysics and philosophy of language. He is the author of Ontological Arguments and Belief in God (Cambridge University Press, 1996).