Biology and Philosophy

Editor:

Michael Ruse, University of Guelph, Canada

Associate Editors:

Francisco J. Ayala, University of California, Irvine, USA; Robert H. Haynes, York University, Canada; David Hull, Northwestern University, Evanston, IL, USA

The past two decades have witnessed fascinating and controversial advances in the biological sciences. One may think, for instance, of methods for analyzing the basic molecular units of heredity; of proposals and clarifications of the appropriate methods of classifying organisms; of exciting new ideas about the nature of the fossil record and their implications for the elucidation of evolutionary mechanisms; and of ways in which the biological study of behavior has been extended, theoretically and experimentally, and of supposed implications for humankind. To add to these internal issues, the outside world has also seen much debate on biology – in the world of education, for instance.

These and other issues have made biology one of the most exhilarating areas of science, and have aroused in biologists and philosophers an awareness that there is a need for meta-theoretical analysis, both about the very nature of biology, as well as about its social implications.

Philosophy and Phenomenological Research

AN INTERNATIONAL QUARTERLY FOUNDED BY MARVIN FARBER

ERNEST SOSA, Editor

RODERICK M. CHISHOLM, Associate Editor

PPR is now fifty percent longer than in the past. This has made possible some new departures with no decrease in refereed material published. For example, more long reviews of individual books now appear, as well as more long review essays of several books on a single topic. And regularly featured book symposia include the following (forthcoming):

1. Charles Taylor's Sources of the Self: The Making of the Modern Identity. Précis by the author. Discussants: Alasdair MacIntyre, Richard Rorty, and Frederick Olafson. Response by the author.
2. Peter Unger's Identity, Consciousness and Value. Précis by the author. Discussants: Sydney Shoemaker, Peter Strawson, Richard Swinburne, and Stephen White. Response by the author.
3. Allan Gibbard's Wise Choices, Apt Feelings. Précis by the author. Discussants: Thomas Carson, Thomas Hill, and Peter Railton. Response by the author.
4. Bas Van Fraassen's Laws and Symmetries. Précis by the author. Discussants: David Armstrong, Nancy Cartwright, and John Earman. Response by the author.
5. Peter van Inwagen's Material Beings. Précis by the author. Discussants: Eli Hirsch, Terry Horgan, and Jay Rosenberg. Response by the author.

PPR can now typeset directly from disks and from text received electronically. This enables us to publish substantially more material in each issue with no increase in the time from submission to publication, or in the time required for publication of reviews and book symposia.

The Fixation of Belief and Its Undoing

Changing Beliefs Through Inquiry

Isaac Levi

Isaac Levi's new book is concerned with how one can justify changing one's beliefs. The discussion is deeply informed by the belief-doubt model advocated by C. S. Peirce and John Dewey, of which the book provides a substantial analysis. Professor Levi addresses the conceptual framework of potential changes available to an inquirer and a structural approach to propositional attitudes is proposed.
