

ABOUT THE AUTHORS...

ROGER W. BENJAMIN, Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Minnesota, is currently on leave at the Institute for Social Research, Tokyo University. One of his major research interests is in the relationship between attitudes of members of the criminal justice process toward the adversary system and their actual behavior. His other interests are in political development and political behavior.

PHOEBE C. ELLSWORTH is a graduate student in social psychology at Stanford University. She is the author of various articles, the most recent of which appeared in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. Her research interests include nonverbal communication and the application of psychological theory and research to legal problems.

PHILIP J. HANNON is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Skidmore College and a member of the California Bar. He is the author of numerous articles and is currently working on a book about politics and the poverty lawyer. His major teaching and research interests are in the areas of administrative law and law in the poverty area.

ROBERT J. LEVY is a Professor of Law at the University of Minnesota. He is also the Reporter on Uniform Marriage and Divorce Law for the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. He has published articles in various legal journals and is one of the authors of a case book on family law. His areas of academic and research interests include family law and social welfare law.

THEODORE B. PEDELISKI is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks. He is currently engaged in research involving a survey of legislation on criminal justice issues in the 50 American states over the previous decade, and a survey of attitudes of adversary system personnel toward selected issues of criminal law. His interests are criminal justice policy, judicial behavior, and the sociology of law.

GRESHAM SYKES is currently serving as a Professor of Law and Sociology at the Denver Law School. He was formerly the Chairman of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Dartmouth College. Professor Sykes also served as an Executive Officer of the American Sociological Association (1963-65), as well as being a member of the President's Advisory Committee on Education (1963-65). Among his publications are Crime and Society and Society of Captives.