LAW & SOCIETY

Review

Policy

The Law & Society Review is a peer-reviewed publication for work bearing on the relationship between society and the legal process, including articles or notes of interest to the research community in general, new theoretical developments, results of empirical studies, and comments on the field or its methods of inquiry. The Review is broadly interdisciplinary and welcomes work from any tradition of scholarship concerned with the cultural, economic, political, psychological, or social aspects of law and legal systems.

Manuscript Submission

Manuscripts submitted to the Review must not be under consideration by another journal, or have been published or be pending publication elsewhere. While there is no strict page limit on articles published in the Review, most are between 25 and 45 pages (8,000 to 14,000 words); the editor must determine that an article significantly longer than 45 pages is sufficiently important to warrant allocating the additional space.

All manuscript submissions are handled electronically. Information on the electronic formats that are currently acceptable and specific guidelines concerning the preparation of manuscripts (e.g., spacing, margins, fonts, handling identifying information, and the Review's style sheet for citations) can be found on the Review's submission website at <http://www.lawandsociety.org/review/mansubm.htm>. A condensed style sheet can be found at the end of each issue.

Information and links for the actual submission are on the submission website. Questions about the submission process should be directed to the editorial office at lsr@umbc.edu. Please direct inquiries about book reviews and review essays to Professor Jennifer Balint, Criminology, The University of Melbourne, jbaling@unimelb.edu.au.
