SHADOW AND SOUND

The Historical Thought of a Sumatran People

James Siegel

Siegel argues that the Atjehnese view of history, as expressed in the language of their epic poetry, is based not on the fixing of historical fact but on a flow of words that is actually immune to the past.

“A fine conclusion to what is now the best available introduction to modern Chinese history.”

—Kirkus Reviews

With the publication of China: The People's Republic, 1949-1976, a monumental, three-volume work of historical reconstruction is now complete. In their trilogy, the authors have succeeded in recreating a living panorama of the tumultuous change that has brought dynastic China of 1840 to its present-day status as an emerging super-power.

“Chesneaux objectively presents the essential facts necessary to comprehension of the political-cultural-economic crises and shifts that China has experienced under Communist rule. An excellent introduction.”

Studies in the Modernization of the Republic of Korea: 1945–1975

This is a new series of studies on the economic and social modernization of Korea undertaken jointly by the Harvard Institute for International Development and the Korea Development Institute. The series has twin objectives: to examine the elements underlying the remarkable growth of the Korean economy and the distribution of the fruits of that growth, together with the associated changes in society and government; and to evaluate the importance of foreign economic assistance, particularly American assistance, in promoting these changes.

Growth and Structural Transformation

Kwang Suk Kim and Michael Roemer

This study provides a comprehensive overview of Korea's macroeconomic growth and structural change since World War II and traces some of the roots of development to the colonial period. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 86 $15.00

The Developmental Role of the Foreign Sector and Aid

Anne O. Krueger

This volume analyzes the role of trade and aid in Korea's modernization and development from 1945 to 1975. The author also discusses the efficiency of Korean economic policies, arguing that the inefficiencies of the 1950s at both the micro and the macro levels stand in sharp contrast to the apparently efficient economic policies of the late 1960s and early 1970s. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 87 $15.00

Harvard University Press
Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138

Urbanization and Urban Problems

Edwin S. Mills and Byung-Nak Song

Focusing on the period since World War II, this work investigates urban growth, its effects on patterns of activity within and among Korean cities, and its effects on urban life. Included are a survey of migration within the country, between South and North Korea, and between Korea and Japan, and a detailed analysis of changes in the spatial patterns of Korean cities, showing the rapid decentralization during recent years. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 88 $15.00

Rural Development

Sung Hwan Ban, Pal Yong Moon,
and Dwight H. Perkins

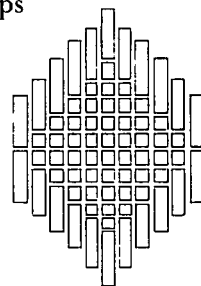

Authors look at the transformation of Korean agriculture from several perspectives. They analyze agricultural output and input, explore the relationship between increased productivity and land reform, and discuss the contribution of the rural sector to economic growth in the other sectors. Harvard East Asian Monographs, 89 $15.00

Education and Development in Korea

Noel F. McGinn, Donald R. Snodgrass,
Yong Bong Kim, Shin Bok Kim,
and Quee Yong Kim

Authors examine major theories of the relationships between education and political and economic development in the context of experiences of South Korea. Covering the years 1945 to 1975, they review previous works in English and Korean and analyze previously unavailable sociological and economic data.

Celebration of Continuity

Themes in Classic East Asian Poetry

Peter H. Lee

This study of images and themes in classic Korean, Chinese, and Japanese poetry is the first comparative treatment of these three traditions, and of East Asian and Western poetry. Awareness of the common features of imagery and thought identified here is essential to our understanding of East Asian poetry. $17.50

Empire and Aftermath

Yoshida Shigeru and the Japanese Experience, 1878–1954

J. W. Dower

This book challenges some of the most popular dichotomies in conventional approaches to modern Japan. It demonstrates the persistent dialectic between external and internal issues, and deemphasizes the significance of purportedly “unique” Japanese values and social patterns in explaining either global or domestic power relations. More importantly, it challenges the convenient sharp dichotomy of “Imperial Japan” and the “new Japan.”

Marcos and Martial Law in the Philippines

Edited by DAVID A. ROSENBERG. Concentrating on the period from 1970 to 1975, two Filipino and three American political scientists take a thorough and balanced view of the Marcos martial law regime and explain how and why it was imposed. They record its effects on the major centers of economic and political life, and explore the wider historical and theoretical significance. "A valuable text!"—Library Journal. $17.50

Economic Growth and Structural Change in Taiwan

The Postwar Experience of the Republic of China

Edited by WALTER GALENSON. For those interested in economic development policy, as well as followers of recent developments in Taiwan, this book will prove invaluable. Seven eminent economists, including a Nobel Prize winner, deal in depth with all major sectors and activities of the economy—agriculture, industry, labor, foreign trade, fiscal policy, and structural change—and address the question of whether or not Taiwan could serve as an appropriate model for developing nations. JAPANESE ECONOMIC HISTORY

AN OUTLINE OF JAPANESE ECONOMIC HISTORY 1603–1940

Major Works and Research Findings

Edited by Mikio Sumiya and Koji Taira

For this overview of national economic development, the editors have assembled and translated selections from the work of Japan's leading economic historians. Together, these selections give a clear outline of Japan's economic institutions and of the nation's development from a feudal land-based economy to a modern capitalist-industrial system. At the same time, they give the reader a picture of the developments and currents in the field of economic history in Japan's universities. Presenting for the first time in English the research and views of several generations of Japanese scholars, this book is a landmark in the study of Japanese economic history. 388 pp. 1979 $ 27.50 / £ 14.50

LABOR AND MANAGEMENT

Edited by Keiichiro Nakagawa

In this volume, business historians from Japan, Europe, and the United States discuss the problems of labor-management relations in the world's industrialized economies. Focusing on the economies of Japan, Great Britain, the United States, and Germany, the contributors outline the history of employer-employee relations, with particular emphasis on the changes in management style and technique in dealing with workers during the formative decades of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. From a comparative perspective, this book sheds new light on the always-problematic relationship between employer and employee in an industrial economy.

The Heritage of Vietnamese Poetry

An Anthology

edited and translated by Huỳnh Sanh Thông

The most extensive and representative collection of traditional Vietnamese verse yet available in a Western language. The nearly 480 poems, written between the tenth and the twentieth centuries, are arranged thematically and include complete versions of six of the most beloved poems in the language. With an introduction setting the historical and literary context and with ample annotation, this anthology makes a major contribution to the study of Southeast Asian literature and culture. $22.50

Untouchable

An Indian Life History

James M. Freeman. Nearly 16% of India's population are untouchables, most of them desperately poor, semi-literate or illiterate, subject to brutal discrimination and economic exploitation, and with no realistic prospects for improvement of their condition. This autobiography (told to an American anthropologist) describes in fascinating detail what it is like to be at the bottom of Indian Life, and what happens when an untouchable attempts to break out of his accepted role. The narrator is Muli, a 40-year-old untouchable living in Orissa, and his story combines rich descriptions of daily life with perceptive observations of his social surroundings. Opening chapters describe the setting and background of Muli's caste and village, and tell how the information was collected. The book concludes with a suggested perspective for interpreting the story, and a discussion of the interviewer's role in creating the life history. Illus. $18.95

The Study of Chinese Society

Essays by Maurice Freedman

Selected and Introduced by G. William Skinner. Twenty-four major essays by the late Maurice Freedman, a brilliant scholar and teacher who profoundly affected the course of anthropological research into Chinese society. Parts 1 and 2 contain his pioneering papers on the Chinese in Singapore and other areas of Southeast Asia, papers that played an important part in attracting anthropologists to the overseas Chinese as a field of study. His three main papers on Hong Kong, which constitute Part 3, showed social scientists what could be learned from observation in "residual China." Part 4 gives us Freedman at his best: eight elegant efforts to reconstruct the religious and kinship patterns of traditional China by a judicious comparison of recent fieldwork and the written record. Part 5 consists of essays on the challenges and problems that Chinese society presents for social anthropologists. $28.50

RICKSHAW

by Lao She

translated by Jean M. James

Lao She's novel Lo-t'o Hsiang Tzu first appeared in English in 1945 as Rickshaw Boy. Jean James' new translation is truer to the original story and supplies the ending that Lao She intended.

The novel is the first important study of a laborer in modern Chinese literature, a relentless account of a worker's struggle, failure, and utter corruption. It is a study in social misery compiled by an acute critic and keen observer whose comprehension of human motives is always profound and often unsettling.

The author's language is that of the streets: brusque, energetic, never dull. His dialect is that of Peking, famous for its sparkle and colorful idiom. This new translation of a modern classic will be savored by anyone who esteems good writing.

THE AGE OF PARTNERSHIP EUROPEANS IN ASIA BEFORE DOMINION edited by Blair B. Kling and M. N. Pearson

These essays deal with shifting relationships in a time of turbulence, from the sixteenth through the eighteenth centuries, and cover a wide range of topics: the failure of missionaries in China; the mixed success of Dutch force of arms in Malaya; the English attempt to graft the joint-stock concept onto the Indian economic structure; corsairs and corruption in India. Most of the essays are about the scramble for wealth: competition for trade routes; gunboat diplomacy; economic pressure. Yet, if among major powers the focus is mainly on force, among individual merchants and groups of merchants there is widespread evidence of alliance and accommodation.
