A New Literary History

PETER N. DUNN

"Contextualizing the picaresque within the larger literary horizons of the period, Dunn has produced a fascinating case study of the way in which genres come into being and flourish within a culture, and of the inevitable tension between critics in search of orderly patterns and writers in search of expressive possibilities."—Mary M. Gaylord, Harvard University. $35.00

Galileo, Courtier

The Practice of Science in the Culture of Absolutism

Mario Biagioli

“One of the most challenging commentaries I’ve read on Galileo’s life and world. . . . Biagioli’s command of primary and secondary documentation is spectacular and his readings of both texts and events are extremely deft and elegant.”—Anthony Grafton, Princeton University

“Biagioli presents a convincing argument for Galileo as the courtly gentlemen whose patronage goals drove his scientific work. This superb book is a joy to read and provides new insight into the history of science.”

In the Vineyard of the Text

A Commentary to Hugh’s Didascalicon

Ivan Illich

By illuminating the life and writings of the 12th-century mystic and theologian Hugh of St. Victor, Illich celebrates the birth of the book and the culture of reading. Illich shows how Hugh’s Didascalicon embodies the leap from monastic texts to scholastic works, and he details the inventions—such as improved punctuation, indentation, chapters, and indexes—that set the stage for a revolution more sweeping than the invention of the printing press 300 years later.

Volume X in the Library of the History of Ideas (LHI)

RENAISSANCE ESSAYS, II
Edited by William J. Connell

In 1992, the University of Rochester Press reprinted as Volume IX in its LHI series the highly acclaimed 1968 Harper/Torch book entitled RENAISSANCE ESSAYS, edited by the distinguished Paul Oskar Kristeller and Philip P. Wiener.

Continuing in the tradition of that classic collection, which represented the best Renaissance scholarship to come out of the first twenty-five years of the Journal of the History of Ideas, is RENAISSANCE ESSAYS, II. For this volume, editor William J. Connell has chosen seventeen of the most influential essays on Renaissance topics to have been published in the last thirty years of the journal, whose subjects include: the definition of humanism, the Renaissance conception of modernity, the significance and uses of Renaissance rhetoric, the relation of painting to the liberal arts, the writing of history in the Renaissance, the role of music in the development of experimental science, the narrative practices of medical case-histories, and the development of a new Renaissance language of statecraft. Petrarch, Valla, Alberti, Accolti, Machiavelli, Steuco, Carcano, Baudoin, Montaigne and Campanella are among the authors interpreted here in significant ways.

Based on the continued academic excellence of the Journal of the History of Ideas since its inception in 1940, RENAISSANCE ESSAYS, II will prove itself an outstanding interdisciplinary contribution to current and future literature in the field of Renaissance studies.

Salve Deus Rex Judaeorum
AEMILIA LANYER

EDITED BY SUSANNE WOODS,
Franklin & Marshall College

Aemilia Lanyer (1569-1645) was the first woman poet in England who sought status as a professional writer. Almost completely neglected until very recently, her work changes our perspective on Jacobean poetry and contradicts the common assumption that women wrote nothing of serious interest until much later.
