Gupta Sculpture

---

---

J. C. Harle

British Economic Thought and India 1600–1858

---

William J. Barber

---

Early seventeenth pamphleteers had to fit an unorthodox pattern of commerce, as represented by the East India Company, into the current orthodoxy of mercantilism. For 250 years British economic analysts had to come to grips with the problems posed by this link with the east. This book shows how the controversies and the emergence of new concepts enriched the development of fundamental economic ideas. £6

The Local Roots of Indian Politics

Allahabad 1880–1920

---

C. A. Bayly

---

Allahabad claims attention as the former capital of a populous north Indian province, as a centre of religion, law, and banking, and also as the home of the Nehrus and other Indian leaders. This study describes the town's institutions and patterns of influence in the 1880s. It shows how administrative initiative, social change, and general political movements modified these patterns before 1920, creating conditions in which a new generation of nationalist leaders achieved substantial local power. £10

Russo–Japanese Frontier in the Pacific

---

John J. Stephan

---

The Kuril Islands have long served as a meeting ground for diverse peoples and cultures from Siberia, Japan, and North America. Since their earliest encounters, Russians and Japanese have shared a shifting Kuril frontier, and the islands are now intimately associated with an enhanced Soviet presence in the Pacific. This book is the first comprehensive study of the Kurils. £6·25

Himalayan Traders

Life in Highland Nepal

CHRISTOPH VON FÜRER-HAIMENDORF

Professor Haimendorf was the first anthropologist to explore the high altitude regions along Nepal's extended frontier with Tibet. In the course of his fieldwork he accumulated extensive data on the trans-Himalayan trade which had linked Tibet, Nepal and India over the centuries. This was disrupted by the Chinese occupation of Tibet in 1959 and Professor Haimendorf demonstrates the drastic effect on communal patterns that resulted. The ethnographic complexity of the many Bhotia populations of Nepal's alpine region provides a fascinating background to this masterly study of traditional and contemporary trading systems. 24 pages photographs, 4 maps £7.50

Discourses of Rumi

Translated by A. J. ARBERRY

These are the discourses of Jalāl al-Din Rumi (1207–73), the greatest mystical poet of Islam, who is believed to have founded the Order of Whirling Dervishes. Passed down in MS for 700 years, these discourses range widely over many topics that concern us today and provide a unique key to the wisdom of Islam. 'They embody a doctrine with both Christian and Zen affinities. Fascinating in themselves, they illuminate the verse and are for the period "a primal source of history"'. The Observer £2

Krishnamurti

The Years of Awakening

MARY LUTYENS

This account of what Krishnamurti himself has called the years of awakening tells a uniquely interesting story, related partly in his own words. It traces his development from the days when, as a boy in India, he was heralded by the leaders of the Theosophical Society as the vehicle for the coming Messiah until, at the age of thirty-four, he broke away completely from the influences and organizations that sought to confine him to a traditional Messianic role. 16 pages of photographs £6.
