Pulling the Devil's Kingdom Down

The Salvation Army in Victorian Britain

Pamela J. Walker

"Pamela Walker's treatment of the Salvation Army restores religious and social complexity to a group too easily misunderstood in the twenty-first century. Drawing us into a vivid, vibrant world of Victorian experience, Walker proves that the significance of the movement extended far beyond the demonstrations that became a familiar part of London street life."

Pedagogical Economies
The Examination and the Victorian Literary Man

CATHY SHUMAN
This book explores the examination's figurative power for 19th-century discourses of subject formation and value through readings of works by Matthew Arnold, Anthony Trollope, Charles Dickens, and John Ruskin, writers who were active in the 1850s and 1860s, when the examination began to structure a range of British institutions, from the working-class primary school to the Indian Civil Service.

Townspiece and Nation
English Urban Experiences, 1540-1640

ROBERT TITTLER
"We know much more about the court and the country in early modern England than we do about urban society and life. What Tittler . . . does successfully in this fine and innovative book, is to tell us about this relatively hidden England and to give it a human face by discussing specific individual lives." —Paul S. Protestant Identities
Religion, Society, and Self-Fashioning in Post-Reformation England

Edited by MURIEL C. MCCLENDON, JOSEPH P. WARD, AND MICHAEL MACDONALD

Singular Continuities
Tradition, Nostalgia, and Identity in Modern British Culture

Edited by GEORGE K. BEHLMER AND FRED M. LEVENTHAL
This volume explores the appropriation of the past in modern British culture. The twelve essays argue that to distinguish between "the new" and "the traditional" today often draws a false dichotomy. It argues that Britishness, in fact, has been the product of continuous creation throughout the 19th and 20th centuries.

The Boxmaker's Revenge
'Orthodoxy,' 'Heterodoxy,' and the Politics of the Parish in Early Stuart London

PETER LAKE
By narrating a protracted and frequently bizarre altercation between a London minister and a member of his flock, this book provides a vivid picture of puritanism at the parish level in early Stuart England, and places this dispute in the multiple social, cultural, and political contexts necessary to understand it.

The Royal Navy, Seapower and Strategy Between the Wars

CHRISTOPHER M. BELL
This is the first study to show how the Royal Navy's ideas about the meaning and application of seapower shaped its policies in the interwar period. It challenges the accepted view that the shortcomings of Britain's naval leaders resulted in poor strategic planning and an inability to meet the challenges of World War II.

VICTORIAN SENSATION

"Victorian Sensation is a spectacularly successful reorientation of the history of popular science. James Secord's fine-meshed study of the controversial Vestiges of the Natural History of Creation is so rich in detail that at times you almost smell the hearth fires burning as readers deliberate.
