with the idea of bargaining, but to establish your mission, which is to be the spokesman of all those crushed by war. You will see that the doors will open. And you will call that the Red Cross miracle.

So good-by, dear Friend, and good luck !

P. Boissier.

WORLD RED CROSS DAY

No Frontiers for Red Cross has been chosen as the theme for the next World Red Cross Day which will take place on May 8, 1966. World-wide focus will be on the Red Cross Principle of Universality.

The truly distinctive character of Red Cross is that it has achieved in a practical manner the universality which no other movement has been able to attain.

Today our world is enveloped in a Red Cross network so interlaced and interrelated that no country, indeed no man, lies outside its reach or influence. The potential of this organisational structure is challenging to the imagination.

The Red Cross principle of Universality is simply but unmistakably stated : " The Red Cross is a world-wide institution in which all Societies have equal status and share equal responsibilities and duties in helping each other."

It is encouraging to note that today Red Cross people look beyond the boundaries of their communities, even of their countries, to help as they can others in distant lands whom they will probably never know or even see.
