AFRICA – THE NEXT THIRTY YEARS

Edited by Ali Mazrui & Hasu Patel

Leading scholars of African affairs examine race relations, ideology, literature, violence and political community. They further project demographic trends; planning for resources; prospects for communications, science and technology; and economic integration and development. Finally, they assess how these projections are likely to influence the continent for the rest of the 20th century. "The balanced approach taken in these essays offers the reader an authoritative concept of Africa's future as it looks at this point in time." Saturday Review

ZAMBIA: SECURITY AND CONFLICT

Jan Pettman

This is a detailed study of domestic and foreign politics in an African state, looking in particular at the way in which the security of the state becomes identified with the survival of the government. The author examines in depth the conflicts and pressures which exist for many of the Third World countries as political leaders strive to achieve domestic stability and international security.

MALAWI Foreign policy and development

Carolyn McMaster

Malawi occupies a key position between black and white-ruled Africa; this book examines the pressures on domestic and foreign policies which result from the country's underdevelopment and geo-political position. The author analyses the way in which decision-making is centred on the political leadership, in the context of South Africa's expanding sphere of influence and the growing activities of the liberation movements in the area.

PEASANT POLITICS Conflict and development in Murang'a

Geoff Lamb

Dr Lamb examines the role of peasant politicians and their relationship with the central government. The book is about the political sociology of class formation, which is seen in the context of local, rural politics and community development in Africa. This is an area of research which will become increasingly important in the next decade. "...new and crucial insights" Tribune

General Elections in South Africa 1943-1970

Kenneth A. Heard

This is the first comprehensive account of the general elections in South Africa from the United Party victory in which General Smuts achieved his greatest personal political triumph until the Afrikaner Nationalists became, up to the election of 1970 at least, ever more firmly entrenched in power. £10.50 OUP Cape Town

Main Currents in Zambian Humanist Thought

Henry S. Meebelo

In many parts of Africa the development of the local form of socialism has been much influenced by a revival of interest in pre-colonial history and social conditions. In Zambia this has led to the formulation of what is known as Zambian Humanism, a way of political thinking that lays emphasis on mutual aid amongst individuals. Paper covers £3.35 OUP East Africa

Tanzania Treaty Practice

E. E. Seaton and Sosthenes T. Maliti

This book is the first to deal with the treaty practice of an African state comprehensively and analytically. It examines the colonial origins and basis of much present-day international law relating to treaties, highlighting its weaknesses and flaws and showing how these are being remedied in Tanzanian theory and practice. Paper covers £4.75 OUP East Africa

Upland Kenya Wild Flowers

A. D. Q. Agnew

This book supplies a need for a concise work on the wild flowers and ferns of an interesting region of East Africa. Although written principally for those parts of Kenya above 3,000 feet altitude, it will be found useful throughout the country and in neighbouring Uganda and Tanzania. Clear keys are given to the 66 families and about 3,000 species are described, of which over 800 are also illustrated with line drawings. £7.75

Tell Me Africa

An Approach to African Literature

African autobiography is considered less an individual phenomenon than a social one, for the African artist's commitment to individualism is sharply qualified by the traditional African view of social reality. Consequently, after a general discussion of the African ethos, each chapter takes up the "autobiographical" literature of a specific group in African society and treats it as both an expression of a personal vision and as a revelation of a permeating social reality.

SYLVIA WASHINGTON BÂ

The Concept of Negritude in the Poetry of Léopold Sédar Senghor

Negritude has been defined by Léopold Sédar Senghor as "the sum of the cultural values of the black world as they are expressed in the life, the institutions, and the works of black men". Sylvia Washington Bâ analyses Senghor's poetry to show how the concept of negritude infuses it at every level. A biographical sketch describes his childhood in Senegal, his distinguished academic career in France, and his election as President of Senegal.

L. CARL BROWN

The Tunisia of Ahmad Bey (1837-1855)

Under the energetic but confused prodding of the activist ruler Ahmad Bey, Tunisia made its first effort to institute European-inspired political and military reforms. L. Carl Brown's book on the reign of Ahmad Bey is thus a case study in modernisation as well as a historical survey of Tunisia in the mid-nineteenth century.

Socio-Political Thought in African Literature

G-C. M. Mutiso

The aim of this work is to draw out from recent African creative writing in the English language significant themes concerning African writers' perceptions of their social and political world. It contains a general consideration of the validity and value of perceptions of this kind; an investigation into how African writers portray a number of social types, themes and contemporary issues; a consideration of African identity in the world context; and a study of African writers' views of the past and their hopes and aspirations for the future of Africa. This stimulating and unusual interpretation of African literature contains much new data and original theory.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
