Narrative and Meaning in Early Modern England

Browne's Skull and Other Histories
Howard Marchitello

This study of narrative techniques in Renaissance discourse analyzes imaginative conjunctions of literary texts, such as those by Shakespeare and Thomas Browne, with developments in scientific and technical writing.

British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice, 1880-1914

Peter D. McDonald

This book is about the radical transformation of British literary culture during the period 1880 to 1914 as seen through the early publishing careers of Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett and Arthur Conan Doyle. McDonald examines the cultural politics of the period by considering the social structure of the literary world in which these writers worked.

Classical Culture and the Idea of Rome in Eighteenth-Century England

Philip Ayres

In the century following the Revolution of 1688, the ruling class promoted—by way of its patronage—a classical frame of mind embracing all the arts, on the foundations of "liberty" and "civic virtue". Ayres' study shows that the propensity to adopt the self image of virtuous Romans was the attempt of a newly empowered oligarchy to dignify and vindicate itself by association with an idealized image of Republican Rome.

Beardsley, Japonisme, and the Perversion of the Victorian Ideal

Linda Gertner Zatlin

Placing Japanese woodblock prints in the English and French cultural milieu of the last third of the Victorian era, Zatlin examines Beardsley's technical and thematic adaptations of Japanese art. She shows how Japanese art set Beardsley free from British artistic restraints and enabled him to create his striking and personal style.

Deadly Dreams

Opium and the Arrow War (1856-1860) in China

J.Y. Wong

Many have accepted that the Arrow War (1856-60) was caused by an insult to the British flag belonging to the pirate boat. Wong argues that Britain's reliance on the opium trade with China played a far greater role in pushing the diplomatic conflict into war and offers penetrating insights into theories of imperialism and how they might be reassessed.

The Enlightenment of Joseph Priestley

A Study of His Life and Works from 1733 to 1773

ROBERT E. SCHOFIELD

"This is a magnificent book, a real monument in modern scholarly letters. Robert Schofield has brought together the many different strands of Priestley's life and achievement and has related them to the general background in which his thought was forged. The result is a readable, interesting, scholarly, perceptive, and generally splendid book."

Wilde the Irishman

Edited by Jerusha McCormack

In this vigorous study, leading Irish literary and artistic figures—including Nobel laureate Seamus Heaney—examine the surprisingly neglected theme of the "Irishness" of Oscar Wilde. The book includes critical essays that explore how Wilde reflected the Irish tradition as well as creative responses to Wilde by poets, playwrights, sculptors, a short story writer, and an actor. 28 illus. $30.00

LOOKING AT EMPIRE

King Khama, Emperor Joe, and the Great White Queen

Victorian Britain through African Eyes

Neil Parsons

"In an account which frequently echoes those eighteenth-century satires on national characteristics, Neil Parsons has skilfully combined an extraordinary range of press reports and other archival materials to reconstruct day by day the uneasy encounter of two largely alien worlds. . . . For the light it throws on the prelude to the [Jameson] Raid, but above all for its portrayal of the awkwardness, naivety, range of prejudice and genuine sympathies experienced on all sides in the process of imperial exchange, this is a remarkable and unusual book." Andrew Porter, Times Literary Supplement

Picturing Empire

Photography and the Visualization of the British Empire

James R. Ryan

"In this fascinating study of the 'optics' of Empire, Ryan provides an extensive and engaging account of the British Empire as a photographic text. Metaphoric allusions to the spectacle of power or the 'eye' of authority are now translated into an illuminating survey of Empire as a photographic project, and photography as an imperial endeavour."—Homi K. Bhabha, University of Chicago

Maps and Politics

Jeremy Black

In the lively and well-illustrated Maps and Politics, Jeremy Black argues persuasively that the supposed "objectivity" of the map-making and map-using process cannot be divorced from aspects of the politics of representation.

"Historian Jeremy Black's elegantly provocative critique of western cartography warrants the attention of anyone intrigued by the power and mystique of maps."—Mark Monmonier, author of How to Lie with Maps, Second Edition
