

The Revival of the Griesbach Hypothesis

An Analysis and Appraisal

C. M. TUCKETT

At the end of the eighteenth century J. J. Griesbach claimed that Mark was not the first but the last synoptic gospel to appear. Dr Tuckett examines contemporary arguments reviving this proposition, and presents a powerful challenge to the Griesbach school of thought. £18.00 net

Authority in Paul and Peter

The Identification of a Pastoral Stratum in the Pauline Corpus and 1 Peter

WINSOME MUNRO

Argues that passages in the New Testament epistles concerning subjection to authority are part of a layer of writing added to the original scriptures in the first half of the second century, designed to assure Christian support for the institutions of Graeco-Roman society. £15.00 net

Sayings of the Risen Jesus

Christian Prophecy in the Synoptic Tradition

M. EUGENE BORING

Investigates the role of the Christian prophets in adding to the tradition of the sayings of Jesus in the early Church, and shows how this affected the developing traditions which eventually became the Gospels. For the first time a method is developed to attempt to distinguish such sayings from those of the historical Jesus. £21.00 net

Hebrews and Perfection

An Examination of the Concept of Perfection in the Epistle to the Hebrews

DAVID PETERSON

The concept of perfection is central to the Epistle to the Hebrews, but what is the precise meaning to be attached to the perfecting of Christ and the perfecting of Christians? Dr Peterson's survey of the background literature suggests that the author of Hebrews uses teleioun in a 'vocational' sense. £21.00 net
