

What are they saying about...

These volumes provide concise, up-to-date summaries of contemporary directions in theological thinking.

What are they saying about Jesus?

By GERALD S. O'COLLINS, S.J. Three of Europe's best-known Catholic theologians – Hans Küng, Walter Kasper and Edward Schillebeeckx – have produced works that give flesh to the new directions in Christology. This book is a report on this recent speculation about Jesus and its implications for Christian faith. $1.75 paper

What are they saying about dogma?

By WILLIAM E. REISER, S.J. This book reviews the present status of dogma as a category of Roman Catholic theology. It examines and weighs what contemporary thinkers such as Rahner, Kasper, Dulles, Baum, and Schillebeeckx have been saying about dogma and its role in the modern religious world. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about the Trinity?

By JOSEPH A. BRACKEN, S.J. Contemporary thinkers tend to look upon "the person" as an autonomous center of consciousness – a belief that would seem to undermine the classical formula of the Trinity. This is a look at contemporary directions in Trinitarian theology, including the interpretation of the Trinity in process-oriented categories. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about death and Christian hope?

By MONIKA K. HELLWIG. Spurred in part by a new concern for the process of death and dying, believers are beginning to reassess the nature of "life after death" and what it promises for individual persons. This book explores some of the things that theologians are saying today – people like Karl Rahner, Ladislav Boros, Roger Troisfontaines, H. A. Williams, Gregory Baum and the author herself. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about the resurrection?

By GERALD S. O'COLLINS, S.J. Writers such as Karl Barth, Raymond Brown, Rudolf Bultmann, Xavier Léon-Dufour, Jürgen Moltmann, Wolfhart Pannenberg, Willi Marxsen and others have offered explanations of the resurrection that, on the surface, appear to collide with each other. This book presents a helpful overview of these interpretations and weighs their strengths and weaknesses. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about the Book of Revelation?

By JOHN J. PILCH. Scripture scholars in recent years have taken renewed interest in the Book of Revelation, one of the least understood books of the New Testament. This clear account of modern scholarship on the subject should go far toward dispelling the popular, often lurid, misunderstandings of this fascinating work. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about Luke and Acts?

By ROBERT J. KARRAS, O.F.M. This concise introduction to the New Testament books of Luke and Acts serves as an up-to-date summary of the current status of Lukan scholarship. $1.95 paper

What are they saying about Christian-Jewish relations?

By JOHN T. PAWLIKOWSKI. The author examines key issues: the Jewish covenant, anti-semitism in the New Testament, the person of Jesus, moral aspects of the Nazi holocaust and others, and identifies principal spokespersons on both sides of the issues. $2.95 paper

The Genesis of Secrecy

On the Interpretation of Narrative

FRANK KERMODE

Frank Kermode has long held a distinctive place among modern critics. He offers here an inquiry—elegant in style and conception—into the art of interpretation.

“. . . The thesis is well wrought, the scholarship varied and well-distributed, and the examples clear and deft.”—Kirkus Reviews
