

NEW JOURNAL!

EARLY MEDIEVAL EUROPE

Early Medieval Europe, to be launched in September 1992, will provide a unique source of information and debate on the history of Europe and the British Isles, from the fourth to the eleventh century.

Although the focus of the journal will be historical, a wide range of sources, methods and disciplines – archaeological, numismatic, palaeographical, diplomatic, literary, onomastic, art historical, linguistic and epigraphical – will be covered.

It will prove essential reading for all students and scholars of the period.

KARL F.
MORRISON

Understanding Conversion

The religious history of European Christians . . . has received much attention of late; and much of it, in its social or historical explanations, tends to become somewhat reductionist about the actual religious experience these people underwent.

Morrison makes an important contribution by attempting to interpret what our sources have to reveal about that experience. The schema he has projected seems to me original and compelling, the interpretations true to what Christians say about their outlooks and inner life.

—John Van Engen, Director of the Medieval Institute, Notre Dame

Conversion and Text

The Cases of Augustine of Hippo, Herman-Judah, and Constantine Tsatsos

The clarity evident in the presentation of these case studies is exemplary. Their subject is of enduring significance. The author's subtle interweaving of approaches is shown to good effect. The writing is absolutely beautiful; poetic and moving.—Thomas F. X. Noble, University of Virginia
