JOURNAL OF SEMITIC STUDIES

edited by

H. H. ROWLEY, Professor of Hebrew Language and Literature in the University of Manchester,

and

P. R. WEIS, Nathan Laski Senior Lecturer in Post-Biblical Jewish Studies, Manchester,

published with the support of the
ISAAC WOLFSON FOUNDATION

The Journal of Semitic Studies has now completed its second year. It has been well received throughout the world both for the scholarship of its articles and for the important book review section.

The field of study is a broad one, and the Journal includes articles of linguistic, literary, historical, archaeological, and cultural interest. Jewish studies are especially represented, covering the whole period of Israel's history, save that current affairs are not included. Arabic and Accadian studies have their place also.

Common Ground said of Volume I, Number 1: "This is a literary venture of the highest importance and, moreover, something in the nature of an innovation. For in this Journal Hebrew and Old Testament literature will be treated in the wider context of Studia Semitica which include Arabic and Accadian. Outstanding scholars have written articles for the early issues and, if we may judge from the standard of the present one, the Journal is assured of a warm welcome from a discerning section of the reading public. Even for the comparative layman there is much which is not only instructive but stimulating."

Islamic Society and the West

A Study of the Impact of Western Civilization on Moslem Culture in the Near East

VOLUME I: ISLAMIC SOCIETY IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY, PART II

H. A. R. GIBB AND HAROLD BOWEN

This completes the first volume of the work, and is devoted almost entirely to the study of religious institutions, after an opening chapter on the organization of taxation and finance. (R.I.I.A.) 35s. net

The Indo-Greeks

A. K. NARAIN

Based mainly on the coins of the Indo-Greeks—their most important historical records—this monograph tells the story of an adventurous people, and clears up many misconceptions.

‘... Dr. Narain has looked at all the evidence—including the Chinese evidence on the movements of peoples from the north who eventually overwhelmed the Greek kingdoms—with a fresh eye, and is to be congratulated on making a solid and important contribution of which all future investigators will be obliged to take serious account.’ G. K. JENKINS in the Royal Central Asian Journal Illustrated 42s. net

The Native Policies of Sir Stamford Raffles in Java and Sumatra

AN ECONOMIC INTERPRETATION

JOHN BASTIN

In the first part of his book the author analyses the principles of Raffles's government in Java against the background of the previous Dutch administration, estimating his significance in the development of British and Dutch native policies. Part II discusses his administration of West Sumatra. 30s. net
