SOVIET AND CHINESE COMMUNISM

Similarities and Differences

Edited and with an Introduction by Donald W. Treadgold. The ideological, political, economic, and social aspects of the two systems are examined by twenty of the Western world's foremost authorities: S. H. Chen, Jerome Alan Cohen, Alexander Dallin, Victor Erlich, Merle Fainsod, Mark G. Field, Gregory Grossman, Harold D. Lasswell, J. M. H. Lindbeck, Leon Lipson, Richard Lowenthal, Sidney Monas, Richard Pipes, Lucian W. Pye, Franz Schurmann, George E. Taylor, Ezra F. Vogel, K. C. Yeh, Donald S. Zagoria, and the editor, Donald W. Treadgold.

Contents: Antecedents of Communism in Russia and China; The Communist Parties: Transformations after the Assumption of Power; Communist Law and Social Change; Freedom and Control; Strategies and Tactics of Economic Development; Russia and China in International Affairs; Russia and China in a Modernizing World.

The contributors to each section speak with authority and clarity on a variety of key issues. In its entirety, this volume will be an indispensable source for all who seek to understand the Communist movement since World War II. January. 528 pages. $10.00

RETREAT FROM CHINA

British Policy in the Far East, 1937-1941

Nicholas R. Clifford. Analyzes Great Britain's response to the undeclared war in China and to Japan's empire building throughout Asia. The author's re-evaluation of the traditional concept of appeasement provides insight into a neglected but vital chapter in the diplomatic history of the 1930's. January. 400 pages. $7.50

FOUNDATIONS OF CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT IN MODERN JAPAN, 1868-1900

By GEORGE AKITA

The author takes sharp issue with traditional interpretations of Meiji constitutional development and, utilizing a vast body of sources, presents a fresh, authoritative, and unusually comprehensive analysis of this key period in Japanese political history. Harvard East Asian Series, 23. $8.50.

POLITICAL THOUGHT IN EARLY MEIJI JAPAN, 1868-1889

By JOSEPH PITTAU, S.J.

Incorporating new materials only recently made available by the Japanese Government and private sources, this book shows that ambivalent elements permeating the ideas of the Meiji leaders produced a principle of constitutionalism adulterated by absolutist doctrines and mythical traditions. Harvard East Asian Series, 24. $6.95

CHINA'S STRUGGLE FOR NAVAL DEVELOP- MENT, 1839-1895

By JOHN L. RAWLINSON

Based almost entirely on Chinese sources, this is the only analysis in English of China's unremitting attempt in the 19th century to build an effective, modern navy. Much more nearly successful than has been realized, China's effort ranks as one of history's important failures. Harvard East Asian Series, 25. $6.50.

LI TA-CHAO AND THE ORIGINS OF CHINESE MARXISM

By MAURICE MEISNER

This is the only full Western treatment of the man who first undertook the adaptation of Marxism to the Chinese historical environment. An associate of Mao's at Peking University in 1918-1919, Li Ta-Chao was executed by Chiang Kai-shek in 1927. He is honored today as Communist China's first true leader and its greatest martyr. Harvard East Asian Series, 27. $4.95

Malaysia Selected Historical Readings

Edited by JOHN BASTIN, University of London, and ROBIN WINKS, Yale University. This impressive collection of readings relating to Malaysia is arranged and introduced so that the evolution of the component countries may be traced through more than five centuries. Over sixty readings range from a description of the founding of Malacca about 1400 (from the indigenous Séjarah Melayu), and Tomé Pires's account of the Portuguese conquest of that city in 1511, to an account of the secession of Singapore from Malaysia. 2 maps. $12.20

Settlement and Social Change in Asia

Collected Papers, Volume One

By WOLFRAM EBERHARD, University of California, Berkeley. This is the first of six volumes containing reissues of the author's earlier papers as well as unpublished essays. Social changes in Asia are explored, with emphasis on how human societies in Asia occupied and used the land as a result of migrations and social structures. Taking China as a case in point, Professor Eberhard traces land tenure in the ancient Orient, the growth of Chinese civilization, family and industrial developments, and settlement problems in medieval China. These essays lead to discussion of a major issue: the function of a city in China. Societies in Pakistan and Afghanistan also receive individual treatment. 56 halftones. $10.00

Studies in Consumer Demand

Volume I: An Analysis of Urban Family Budgets in East Pakistan

Volume II: An Analysis of Rural Family Budgets in East Pakistan

By NURUL ISLAM, Director, Pakistan Institute of Development Economics, Karachi. This work is the first comprehensive study of consumer behavior in Pakistan based on national sample survey data. The volumes undertake a systematic analysis of the pattern of consumptive expenditures; the factors which determine the distribution of consumer expenditures among different commodities; and the relationship between expenditures and household size, geographical dispersion, and the rural and urban background of the consumers. The volumes were done under the auspices of the Bureau of Economic Research, Dacca University. Tables. Each, $5.30

The Population of Borneo

A Study of the Peoples of Sarawak, Sabah and Brunei

By L. W. JONES, Demographic Advisor to the United Nations at Beirut. The first book-length demographic study of the Borneo states in the northern part of the island is divided into two parts, the first dealing with population density, distribution, and vital statistics in the pre-war years, and the second covering the period of rapid population growth experienced since the disasters of World War II. The author has also assessed the nature of some of the problems which have still to be encountered as a result of the current high growth rate of the population. The social and economic implications for the future of the current rates of population growth are closely considered. Map. $6.75

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF REPUBLICAN CHINA

HOWARD BOORMAN, Editor

RICHARD C. HOWARD, Associate Editor

Volume I: Ai-Ch'ü

Columbia University Press is proud to announce the publication of the most important reference work on modern China to appear since the Second World War.

Over ten years in the making, this biographical dictionary will provide a massive reference work, at once systematic and comprehensive, for all organizations, libraries, and individuals concerned with twentieth-century China. The projected five volume series will furnish life stories of some six hundred Chinese of this century, including political and military leaders and individuals prominent in diplomacy, business and banking, literature, the arts, scholarship, social reform, education, the press and publishing, science, religion, aviation, medicine, and other fields. The careers of living persons, as well as those who have died, will be included.

Volume I, to be published in February, contains 150 biographical articles on Chinese with surnames from Ai through Ch'ü, prominent in the republican period (1911-49). Among those included are Chiang Kai-shek, his son Chiang Ching-kuo and other senior figures who serve the Government of Republican China in Taiwan; leading figures of the Central People's Government at Peking such as Chou En-lai; scientists like Ch'ien San-sh'iang, director of the Institute of Atomic Energy of the Academy of Sciences; and modern scholars including Ch'en Yin-k'ò, regarded by many as the world's leading sinologist and Chao Yuen-ren, internationally distinguished linguist of the University of California at Berkeley.

THE ŌNIN WAR

History of Its Origins and Background with a Selective Translation of
The Chronicle of Ōnin

H. PAUL VARLEY

The author examines the institutional development of military government in Japan from its beginning until the mid-fifteenth century and traces in detail the events leading to the Ōnin War (1467-77), which marked the end of the first attempt at central control by the military. His selective translation of The Chronicle of Ōnin makes this important historical source available for the first time in English.

International Aid to Thailand

The New Colonialism?

by Ronald C. Nairn

The author attributes the failure of two international aid projects in Thailand to attitudes and methods which differed little from the earlier efforts of colonial powers. Among the factors he finds to have contributed to the ineffectiveness of United Nations efforts to impart Western skills and ideas are the technicians' virtual lack of Thai language training and poor preparation for the cultural and physical environment. $6.50

Ts'ao Yin and the K'ang-hsi Emperor

Bondservant and Master

by Jonathan D. Spence

In this first book on the early Ch'ing dynasty in China, the author focuses on the many-sided career of a bondservant, and provides a sharp reflection of the changing faces of the Ch'ing emperors. "Mr. Spence's work shows a mastery of structure and action, of institutions and the people who operated in them, of the general trends and the particular details. The description of the emperor's southern tours is a monograph in itself."—John K. Fairbank. $7.50

The Social Democratic Movement in Prewar Japan

by George Oakley Totten, III

Traces the development of each of the various segments of the socialist movement in Japan in the 1920s, finding behind the kaleidoscopic changes a continuity in the persistence and cohesiveness of three major factional groups: the Socio-Democratic and Japan-Labor cliques and the Labor-Farmer faction. Mr. Totten's themes are further explored in a companion volume, Socialist Parties in Postwar Japan. $12.50

Socialist Parties in Postwar Japan

by Allan B. Cole, George O. Totten, and Cecil H. Uyehara

In examining the progress of the socialist movement in Japan since World War II, the authors analyze the movement in terms of its organization, theory, and policies. Of special interest to American readers is the discussion of Socialist foreign policies, which concentrates on their neutralism, their attitudes toward security and rearmament, their criticisms of the United States, and their views on relations with Russia and Communist China. $12.50

STAGES OF INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT IN ASIA

by Sung Jae Koh

A comparative history of the cotton industry in Japan, India, China, and Korea. "The book represents a contribution in the general fields of economic history and comparative economic development . . . Koh's comparative approach has much to commend it. The factors unique to Japan's rapid development are made to stand out in light of India's experience. Likewise some retarding factors in the Chinese and Indian textile industries come into focus when contrasted with other Asian countries."—Alan W. Heston. 461 pp. $12.00

THE BLUE MUTINY

The Indigo Disturbances in Bengal 1859-1862

by Blair B. Kling

The peasant uprising on the indigo plantations of Bengal posed a fundamental question for the British rulers of India: Should the British continue to support the brutal system of indigo planting for the sake of commercial interest—or should their first responsibility be instead the welfare of the peasant masses in India? In a furious contest for government support, political interest groups emerged which became the nucleus of modern Indian nationalism. 243 pp. $6.00
