

Call for Applications

2001-2002 ACUNS Dissertation Award

As part of the effort to invest in the next generation of scholars and with financial support from the Ford Foundation, the Academic Council on the United Nations System has established a competitive award program for a social scientist or the equivalent for legal scholars. This award can be used independently or in conjunction with another fellowship. Subsequent to review by an independent selection committee, this award will be disbursed in July 2001 to cover the period 1 July 2001 - 30 June 2002.

A completed application will include a 3-to-4 page description of the applicant's dissertation research proposal, curriculum vitae, and at least one letter of recommendation from the applicant's doctoral mentor or a faculty member who knows his/her work. It is the sole responsibility of the applicant to ensure that his/her dossier is complete by the application deadline. Completed applications must be postmarked by 15 January 2001.

Applicants will be notified of the selection committee's decision in the Spring of 2001. For further guidelines and an application form, please contact:

New Works and Expert Analysis

Ambivalent Embrace

America's Troubled Relations with Spain from the Revolutionary War to the Cold War
By Rodrigo Botero

Contributions to the Study of World History, No. 78

For nearly two centuries interaction between Spain and the United States was characterized by cultural and political differences, mutually perceived conflicts of national interest, and an asymmetry of power. Botero shows why, in spite of political differences, mutual distrust, and reciprocal grievances, both governments found it in their best interest to reach an agreement on the issue of European defense.

Deterrence and Nuclear Proliferation in the Twenty-First Century

Edited by Stephen J. Cimbala

This edited collection offers a prognosis about the role of nuclear weapons and nuclear arms control in future U.S. defense and other international security policy. Formerly the weapons of choice that defined great power status—nuclear forces—after the end of the Cold War may be the preferred weapons by which the weak checkmate the strong.

Oil, War, and Anglo-American Relations

American and British Reactions to Mexico's Expropriation of Foreign Oil Properties, 1937-1941

By Catherine E. Jayne

Contributions in Latin American Studies, No. 19

Analyzes Anglo-American reactions to Mexico's March 1938 expropriation of British and American oil interests and examines how the nationalization proved to be an irritant in U.S.-British relations.

The Roots of Rhetoric

Politics of Nuclear Weapons in India and Pakistan

By Haider K. Nizamani

Through a comparative analysis, Nizamani reveals the political underpinnings of nuclear weapons development, arguing that Indian and Pakistani nuclearization is linked to processes of national formation.

Beyond the Ideal

Pan Americanism in Inter-American Affairs
Edited by David Sheinin

"In this impressive set of essays on what the editor calls "the friendly face of American dominance in the hemisphere," leading scholars of inter-American relations offer fresh and provocative multinational perspectives. Cultural and environmental aspects of Pan Americanism join strategic, economic, and political dimensions. This book is the place to start for the most up-to-date scholarship."

Nuclear Proliferation in the Indian Subcontinent

The Self-Exhausting "Superpowers" and Emerging Alliances

By Hooman Peimani

The failure of India and Pakistan to achieve their regional and international objectives through a nuclear capability has turned them into dissatisfied regional powers which, Peimani asserts, are being pushed toward the formation of two hostile alliances with Russia and China respectively. The rising alliances will challenge the American-led international system and contribute to the consolidation of multipolarity.

New from Princeton

After Victory

Institutions, Strategic Restraint, and the Rebuilding of Order
after Major Wars

G. John Ikenberry

The end of the Cold War was a “big bang” reminiscent of earlier moments after major wars, such as the end of the Napoleonic Wars in 1815 and the end of the World Wars in 1919 and 1945. Here John Ikenberry asks the question: What do states that win wars do with their newfound power and how do they use it to build order?

“A major contribution to IR theory and to thinking about international order.”—Robert Gilpin, Princeton University

Stay the Hand of Vengeance

The Politics of War Crimes Tribunals

Gary Jonathan Bass

Gary Bass offers an unprecedented look at the politics behind international war crimes tribunals, combining keen analysis with investigative reporting and a broad historical perspective.

“This study of the politics of war crimes tribunals discovers past cases that almost nobody had examined and covers in a lucid and provocative way more familiar recent examples. It is the best book on the subject. . . .”

War and Punishment

The Causes of War Termination and the First World War

H. E. Goemans

What makes wars drag on and why do they end when they do? Here H. E. Goemans brings theoretical rigor and empirical depth to a long-standing question of security studies.

“This may very well be the best book written in the last twenty years by a political scientist on war termination, war aims, and World War I. . . . Not only does the book contain tremendously valuable theoretical insights, but it also provides compelling empirical evidence.”—Allan C. Stam, Yale University

2001 ACUNS/ASIL Summer Workshop on International Organization Studies
University of Namibia, August 2001

HUMANITARIAN INTERVENTION AND THE ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Program

The Academic Council on the United Nations System (ACUNS) and the American Society of International Law (ASIL) are sponsoring the eleventh in a series of summer workshops on international organization studies to be held at the University of Namibia, Windhoek, Namibia, from 5 August to 18 August 2001. This workshop is designed specifically for advanced graduate students, post-doctoral scholars, young international relations and law school faculty, lawyers and practitioners from policy circles and civil society.

The purposes of this workshop are to encourage new directions in international organizations and related legal studies, establish and strengthen contacts amongst legal and international relations scholars and UN practitioners, and stimulate teaching and research in these subjects.

The 2001 workshop will be directed by Charlotte Ku, Executive Director of ASIL, Washington, D.C., and Clement Adibe, international relations professor at DePaul University, Chicago, Illinois.

The theme for this year's workshop is "Humanitarian Intervention and the Role of International Organizations." The issue of intervention has been the subject of heated debates at the United Nations and within the international community. When must sovereignty be respected and when should international organizations intervene in times of human crisis? What roles do local and global governance, civil society, and financial institutions play during those times? Issues of human rights, refugees, post-conflict reconstruction, peacekeeping, democratization, economic aid, the use of force and other relevant topics will be focal points of the workshop. Given that most crises have occurred on the African continent, having this workshop in Africa will engender a more meaningful and sober understanding of humanitarian crises.

The 2001 workshop will explore the concepts and instruments that are needed to handle the challenges of humanitarian crises, new understandings of law and governance that might be required in the face of these challenges and the responsibilities of the UN, NGOs, and other regional and international organizations.

The workshop will consist of presentations by and interaction with experts in the field, exercises and discussions focusing on developing greater links between academics and practitioners, skills development in teaching, research and writing on international organization and participant presentations.

Application Procedure

Completed applications must be postmarked no later than 15 January 2001. Twenty to twenty-five selected participants will receive travel stipends, room, and board. For more information and an application form, please contact:
