

GAME THEORY FOR POLITICAL SCIENTISTS

James D. Morrow

Game theory is the mathematical analysis of strategic interaction and it has been widely applied to problems in economics. Until recently, however, its usefulness in political science has been underappreciated, in part because of the technical difficulty of the methods developed by economists. James Morrow's book is the first to provide a standard text adapting contemporary game theory to political analysis.

Morrow focuses on noncooperative game theory and its application to international relations, political economy, and American and comparative politics.

"It is easily the best book of its type ever written for a political science audience."

THE SOVEREIGN STATE AND ITS COMPETITORS

Hendrik Spruyt

Hendrik Spruyt argues that there was nothing inevitable about the rise of the present international state system. Examining the competing institutions that arose during the decline of feudalism, Spruyt disposes of the familiar claim that the superior size and war-making ability of the sovereign nation-state made it the natural successor to the feudal system.

"Hendrik Spruyt takes on a theme which is major by any standards and of central import to political science. He is on top of current literature about evolution and social change, as well as more abstract work within the philosophy of social science. All is used to substantive effect in his convincing demonstration. . . ."

Published since 1951 by the International Political Science Association (all back volumes are available), the Abstracts is a major source of bibliographic information in political science. It publishes abstracts of articles in specialized and non specialized periodicals, including major yearbooks. Articles in English are abstracted in English; those in other languages (about one fourth of the total) are abstracted in French, with all titles translated into English. In 1993 it published 6,332 abstracts from over 1,000 journals, in six issues. Each issue carries a detailed subject index and a list of the periodicals examined. The final issue of each volume provides a cumulative subject index and an author index.

Richard K. Hermann, Brian M. Pollins, & Goldie Shabad
Department of Political Science, The Ohio State University

Now with

The Mershon International Studies Review

Edited by Margaret Hermann, The Mershon Center at The Ohio State University

As the official journal of the International Studies Association, International Studies Quarterly acquaints a broad audience of readers with the best work being done in the variety of intellectual traditions included under the rubric of international studies. The journal speaks to a wide community of scholars representing many countries and areas of research. Its multidisciplinary approach makes it one of the most cited journals in the field.

The articles in International Studies Quarterly:

- Attend to the various political, economic, social and cultural factors affecting societies
- Contribute to the development of theoretical discourse in the interdisciplinary field of international studies
- Systematically take up enduring practical questions, such as problems and policies of social system management and reform, and problematics and strategies of fundamental social and political change

With the addition of The Mershon International Studies Review in the spring and fall, the journal will provide a window on worldwide trends through its regular reviews of books published outside as well as inside North America. Its analytical reviews explore research on topics of current interest, theoretical and methodological debates, and recent advances in core sub-fields through multi-book and single book reviews. The Review brings you these sooner than any other social science publication.

INTENTIONAL OIL POLLUTION AT SEA Environmental Policy and Treaty Compliance

Ronald B. Mitchell

Although an international treaty governs how tankers must dispose of oil, compliance has been a problem. Intentional Oil Pollution at Sea combines theoretical analysis with a rigorous empirical evaluation of changes in the compliance process over time and identifies policies that have increased compliance by governments and the oil transportation industry.

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC POLICY IN THE 1990S

William R. Cline

"This book is significant for a number of reasons. Cline integrates many of the concepts that form the basis of modern international economic policy formation and analysis into a coherent, accessible whole. The book is timely in that it focuses on important current international economic issues, yet timeless in its treatment of these issues. Cline's book will be valuable to scholars, policymakers, and businesspeople for years to come." — Michael Enright, Harvard University

MANAGING THE WORLD ECONOMY: Fifty Years after Bretton Woods
Peter B. Kenen, editor

The international economic order established at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire in 1944 has contributed significantly to world growth and stability. But the world economy will be very different in the 21st century due to the end of the Cold War, the advent of new economic powers, and the globalization of markets and companies. The Group of Seven major industrial democracies, at their Naples summit in July 1994, decided to consider "What framework of institutions will be required to meet the challenges of the 21st century?" and "How can we adapt existing institutions and build new institutions to ensure the future prosperity and security of our people?"

This volume presents the results of an Institute conference at which leading experts and policymakers assessed the record of the Bretton Woods regime over the past half century and the need to modernize the system now. Specific proposals are made for reforming the international monetary and trading systems, including through changes in the roles of the International Monetary Fund, GATT and the new World Trade Organization, and the World Bank. The volume also assesses the case for creating new institutional arrangements to address several issues that have recently attained greater prominence on the global agenda—investment, financial markets, the environment, and migration. C. Fred Bergsten provides a concluding paper that purposes major changes in existing institutions and creation of new ones to meet the challenges of the future.
