Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Contributors

Per Bloland is a composer of acoustic and electroacoustic music whose compositions range from short intimate solo pieces to works for large orchestra, and incorporate video, dance, and custom-built electronics. He is currently Visiting Assistant Professor of Computer Music at the Oberlin College Conservatory, and serves as the founding director of OINC, the Oberlin Improv and Newmusic Collective.

Michael Buchler is Associate Professor of Music Theory at Florida State University. His most recent work has involved the music of Frank Loesser. He has been a board member of the Society for Music Theory and his work appears in Music Theory Spectrum, Journal of Music Theory, Perspectives of New Music, and other journals.

Renée Camus is the creator, writer, choreographer, and narrator of the video Dancing through the Centuries: Two-Step to Lindy Hop. She has taught percussive and historical social dance, and presented papers and demonstrations at conferences of the Society for American Music and other organizations. Her articles and reviews appear in the SAM Bulletin, Brown Reference Group encyclopedias, and the forthcoming second edition of The New Grove Dictionary of American Music (including the entry for clog dancing).

Baritone Ralph Cato has performed masterworks from opera, oratorio, musical theater, and art song repertoire to critical acclaim around the world. He was featured in the Irish dance show, Riverdance, and may be heard on the recently released CD, Riverdance, Live from Beijing. Cato earned his DMA from the University of California, Los Angeles, and teaches voice and diction for singers at the University of California, Riverside.

Brigid Cohen is Assistant Professor of Music at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the author of Stefan Wolpe and the Avant-Garde Diaspora. She is currently working on a new monograph that broadly reframes the history of musical modernism through a sustained focus on migration and acts of cultural translation. Her research has been supported by the American Musicological Society and the American Academy in Berlin.

Sabine Feisst is Associate Professor of Music History and Literature at Arizona State University. Focusing on twentieth-century and contemporary music studies, she has published Schoenberg's New World: The American Years (Oxford University Press, 2011), Der Begriff "Improvisation" in der neuen Musik (Studio Verlag, 1997 and 2011), and numerous articles on Schoenberg and American music in essay collections, professional journals, and encyclopedias.

A graduate of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, guitarist Giacomo Fiore has performed professionally across the United States, Brazil, Canada, and Europe. Currently a Ph.D. candidate in Cultural Musicology at the University of California, Santa Cruz, his research focuses on U.S. experimental music, organology, and alternative intonation. He has presented his work at regional and national meetings of the American Musicological Society and the Society for American Music.

Matthew L. Garrett is Assistant Professor of Choral Music Education and Director of Choirs at Case Western Reserve University. He received his Ph.D. in Choral Music Education and Conducting from Florida State University with a dissertation on critical thinking skills in high school choral rehearsals. Before joining the CWRU faculty, he was a music educator in Florida and Massachusetts public schools at the middle and high school levels.

Sandra Jean Graham is an ethnomusicologist on the faculty of the Division of Arts and Humanities at Babson College, Wellesley, MA. Her research focuses on Negro spirituals, blackface minstrelsy, folk music, and performance practice. She is currently completing a book on the popularization of spirituals, to be published by University of Illinois Press.

David Nicholls is Professor of Music at the University of Southampton. He has published widely on American music and is the author of two monographs, American Experimental Music, 1890–1940 (Cambridge University Press, 1990) and John Cage (University of Illinois Press, 2007). He edited the Cambridge History of American Music (Cambridge University Press, 1998).

Douglas Reside was appointed Digital Curator for the Performing Arts at the New York Public Library in January 2011, after serving for several years on the staff of the Maryland Institute for Technology in the Humanities at the University of Maryland, College Park. He holds the B.S. in computer science and the B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. in English literature. He is currently working on a book on the “born-digital” musical.

Scott Warfield is Associate Professor of Music History at the University of Central Florida. He is the author of “From Hair to Rent: Is ‘Rock’ A Four-Letter Word on Broadway?” in The Cambridge Companion to the Musical (2002; 2nd ed., 2008). He also writes frequently about Richard Strauss; his latest essay, “Strauss and the Business of Music,” appears in The Cambridge Companion to Richard Strauss (2010).

John Wriggle received his Ph.D. in musicology from the CUNY Graduate Center, and M.A. in Jazz History and Research from Rutgers University–Newark. He has taught courses at Rutgers, The City College of New York, and John Jay College, and also works as a freelance performer, arranger, and music editor. He is currently writing a book on popular music arranging in Swing Era New York.

Aaron Ziegel is a visiting lecturer in musicology at the University of Illinois where he earned his Ph.D. in 2011. His research explores the opera-writing efforts of U.S. composers during the early decades of the twentieth century. He has also published articles on the film music of Philip Glass and on the career and compositional language of Vernon Duke (Vladimir Dukelsky).
