ANCIENT SICHUAN AND THE UNIFICATION OF CHINA

Steven F. Sage

Recent archaeological finds in China have made possible a reconstruction of the ancient history of Sichuan, the country's most populous province. Excavated artifacts and newly recovered texts can now supplement traditional textual materials. Combining these materials, Sage shows how Sichuan matured from peripheral obscurity to attain central importance in the formation of the Chinese empire during the first millennium B.C.

"What I like most about this book is that it is enjoyable to read, and makes ancient history come alive. The author's style is lively and carries the reader through the history of ancient Sichuan and its role in the greater sphere of ancient Chinese history.

"This topic is definitely significant. A study of ancient Sichuan has been long overdue. The analysis is made more important by placing ancient Sichuanese history in the context of both the history of the northern central states, especially Qin, and the dominant southern state, Chu.

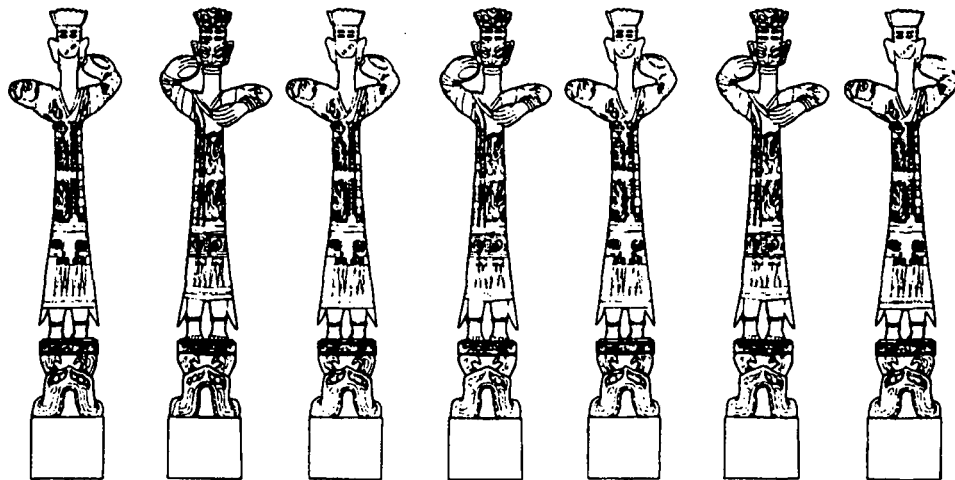

"It is also significant that large portions of the Hua Yang Guo Zhi have been rendered into English—although the work is known to have certain historical problems, it is an important text for people researching the ancient history of China's southwest. It has never been translated, and Sage's work helps to remedy this situation."

THE TEXTUAL HISTORY OF THE HUAI-NAN TZU

by Harold David Roth

The Huai-nan Tzu is an important source of early Taoist thought completed in 139 B.C. by the intellectual circle surrounding Liu An, the King of Huai-nan, and the grandson of Liu Pang, founder of the Han Dynasty. The Textual History of the Huai-nan Tzu traces the nature, origins, and transmission of the text, analyzes the content and history of all its commentaries, determines the identity and filiation of its 85 complete and 31 abridged extant editions, and establishes a sample critical text for one of its twenty-one chapters.

"Beyond the use of this work as a model for approaching other texts, the study provides extremely important information about the Huai-nan Tzu itself...The Huai-nan Tzu cannot be used in a responsible way without someone having done the kind of work that Roth has done." - Roger T. Ames

"This study is very well organized, clearly and systematically presented, and carefully documented with evidence to discuss the transmission processes of all the editions. ...Roth's book serves as a model for textual identification, which is the first step for textual analysis in criticism of other ancient texts." - T. H. Tsien

"Roth's study exemplifies an extraordinary effort in meticulous textual and historical scholarship." - Anthony C. Yu

An Insight Into The Asian And Pacific Regions

The Role of Labour-Intensive Sectors in Japanese Industrialization

There still exists in Japan today small-scale, labour-intensive industries which have survived Japan's rapid growth and continues to play a critical part in development. This fact is demonstrated by author Johzen Takeuchi, a professor of Economic History at Hiroshima University, in tracing the small-scale, labour-intensive industries in Japan from the Meiji period (1868-1912) up to World War II. With numerous case studies of the shell-button, brush, knit-fabric and bicycle industries, he shows how each industry was established and developed. Analysis of the social role of each industry in the internal and international economic and political context is presented along with information showing the sometimes harsh relations among merchants, manufacturers and workers.

General Trading Companies

This study by a group of Japanese business and economic historians, contributes to a better understanding of technological development in Japan generally and more particularly, of the specific character of the Japanese general trading company and its role in that development. Comparisons are made with similar trading firms in Great Britain and the United States. Discussions focus on aspects of management, merchandise and organizations structures. A detailed study of Japan's largest general trading company, Mitsui Bussan, is also featured.

Industrial Pollution in Japan

'Industrial Pollution in Japan' begins with a look at the well-known Ashio Copper Mine pollution case, one of modern Japan's first and most devastating environmental disasters; the country's worst pollution incident in the post-war period, the mercury poisoning in Minamata, whose victims are still on the increase today, is also covered in depth. Two other major incidents of the post-war period are detailed, and in addition to these specific cases, an overall analysis of the social, economic, political and technological factors relevant to industrial pollution is provided.

THE GREAT GAME

The Struggle for Empire in Central Asia

by Peter Hopkirk

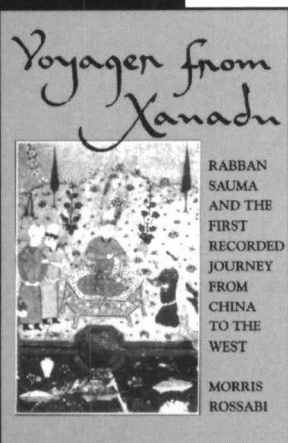

This acclaimed account of the roots of today's "new Great Game" tells the story of the imperial struggle between Victorian Britain and Czarist Russia for strategic and economic supremacy in Central Asia. Based on meticulous scholarship and on-the-spot research, The Great Game is an absorbing history—one that has become compellingly topical as a new power struggle emerges.

Critical Acclaim for the British Edition of The Great Game:

"Gives due weight to all its aspects, which is no less than readers of his earlier books on Central Asia would expect.... Rousing history deftly unrolled by Mr. Hopkirk...."

VOYAGER FROM XANADU

Rabban Sauma and the First Journey from China to the West

by Morris Rossabi

Morris Rossabi, distinguished scholar and author of Khubilai Khan, vividly recounts the monumental journey of Rabban Sauma, who was the first man from China to reach Europe. Sauma, who originally set out on a religious pilgrimage, was sent on an unprecedented diplomatic mission to convince the Pope and Kings of England and France to launch a crusade with the Persian Mongols against the Egyptian Muslims who ruled the Holy Land. While tracing the life of an extraordinary man, the author also creates an erudite overview of the intrigues and upheavals of the 13th-century Mongol-Muslim-Christian worlds.

Praise for Rossabi's Khubilai Khan:

"Will undoubtedly become and remain the standard in the field for years to come...well-organized, well-written, and objective."—Choice

"A scholarly biography [that] can be read with full understanding and enjoyment by those who are not specialists."—History Today

PURPOSE AND ORGANIZATION

The Association for Asian Studies is a scholarly, non-political, and non-profit professional association open to all persons interested in Asia and the study of Asia. It seeks through publications, meetings, and seminars to facilitate contact and exchange of information among scholars and to increase understanding of Asia. The Association for Asian Studies is the largest society of its kind in the world. Its 7,000 members include scholars, teachers, business people, diplomats, journalists, and interested laypersons.

Founded in 1941 as the Far Eastern Association, the organization was renamed the Association for Asian Studies in 1957 to reflect the wider geographic interests of its membership. In 1970, four elective area Councils—South Asia, Southeast Asia, China and Inner Asia, and Northeast Asia—were established to guarantee each area constituency its own representation and a proportionate voice on the Board of Directors. In 1977, a Council of Conferences was established as a liaison with eight regional conferences throughout the United States to serve the needs of those interested in Asian studies in different parts of the country. The Association is a member of the American Council of Learned Societies and the National Council of Area Studies Associations, actively participating with its sister societies in a wide range of activities, including joint participation in research and informational exchanges.

Publications of the Association include The Journal of Asian Studies, the Bibliography of Asian Studies, Doctoral Dissertations on Asia, the Asian Studies Newsletter, the Monograph Series, and committee publications. The Association holds a three-day meeting each spring devoted to planned programs of scholarly papers, round table discussions and panel sessions on a wide range of problems in research and teaching, and on Asian affairs in general. From time to time, it sponsors, through its committees, special conferences on research problems and other matters of topical interest.

SERVANTS, SHOPHANDS, AND LABORERS IN THE CITIES OF TOKUGAWA JAPAN

Gary P. Leupp

In this analysis of lower-class life in Tokugawa Japan (1603-1868), Gary Leupp vividly portrays the emergence of an urban proletariat during a time of extraordinary economic change. With the rapid increase in urban construction and commercial activity, hired laborers came to replace the traditional corvée workers, while in households, contracted servants supplanted lifetime, hereditary workers. Leupp shows that in the same way that products previously restricted to use by the elite became commodities for mass consumption, labor power itself became a commodity.

"This book will be very useful to students of modern Japan who seek to understand the origins of class relations and the industrial work force. The data alone are breathtaking. . . . This study is also wonderfully comparative, drawing on the author's profound knowledge of the literature on servants and laborers in early modern Europe."

RITUAL POETRY AND THE POLITICS OF DEATH IN EARLY JAPAN

Gary L. Ebersole

This examination of death rituals in early Japan finds in the practice of double burial a key to understanding the Taika Era (645-710 A.D.). Drawing on narratives and poems from the earliest Japanese texts—the Kojiki, the Nihonshoki, and the Man'yōshū an anthology of poetry—it argues that double burial was the center of a manipulation of myth and ritual for specific ideological and factional purposes.

"This volume has significantly raised the standard of scholarship on early Japanese and Man'yōshū studies."—Joseph Kitagawa

"So convincing is the historical and religious thought displayed here, it is impossible to imagine how anyone can ever again read these documents in the old way."

—Alan L. Miller, The Journal of Religion
