Biographical Dictionary of Latin American and Caribbean Political Leaders

Edited by Robert J. Alexander

This is a compilation of biographical sketches of the most important political figures in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in Latin America and the Caribbean. Each entry describes the subject's political significance as well as their career, family background, education, and relevant nonpolitical activities. Appendixes list the leaders according to country or territory, and provide a chronology of major events in the region from Haitian independence in 1804 to the present day.

Sport and Society in Latin America

Diffusion, Dependency, and the Rise of Mass Culture

Edited by Joseph L. Arbena

Sport and Society in Latin America vividly demonstrates the ways in which sport can be used to study various historical and social processes and expands our understanding of sport as a major form of social behavior in Latin America. The contributors analyze the relationship of sport to foreign penetration and cultural imitation, urbanization and the rise of mass society, social divisiveness and social integration, class conflict, politics, and nationalism and revolution.

Latin American Debt and Adjustment

External Shocks and Macroeconomic Policies

Edited by Philip L. Brock, Michael B. Connolly, and Claudio Gonzalez-Vega

The fourteen papers presented in this volume are thought-provoking studies of the economic adjustment of Latin America to the difficult external environment of the 1980s. The articles go beyond description of the debt problems to offer insights on the more fundamental long-range problems facing policymakers in the region. Positive analyses into the nature of the adjustment process and insights into future institutional changes that could improve the functioning of the Latin American economies highlight the book.

Guiding the Invisible Hand

Economic Liberalism and the State in Latin American History

Edited by Joseph L. Love and Nils Jacobsen

This unprecedented collection combines economic, political, and intellectual history in its analysis of economic liberalism in Latin America. The volume demonstrates the unique and varied features in Latin American liberalism from its formative period up to 1940 and discusses its relation to state formation. The essays range from a continent-wide comparison to an in-depth local study, from tariff and industrialization policies of central states to the selective liberal convictions of traditional estate owners.

Democracy Under Siege

New Military Power in Latin America

Edited by Augusto Varas

Although the military has historically played a pivotal role in Latin American politics and society, until now little attention has been paid to the complex set of civilian-military relations in each country. This collection of essays, the product of a long-term research program organized by a group of prominent Latin American scholars, compares current linkages among the armed forces and local social and political structures and institutions.

ETHNICITY AT WORK

Divided Labor on a Central American Banana Plantation

Philippe I. Bourgois

A penetrating analysis of how a multinational corporation exploits ethnicity—and racism—for its own purposes. For sixteen months, Philippe Bourgois lived in the squalid worker's barracks of a giant United Fruit Company plantation and socialized in the luxurious "White Zone" of its managerial elite. "The book offers a picture of the working of the plantation system from within, something I have not seen anywhere else."—Eric Wolf, Herbert H. Lehman College

THE INFORMAL ECONOMY

Studies in Advanced and Less Developed Countries

edited by Alejandro Portes, Manuel Castells, and Lauren A. Benton

The informal or underground economy is thriving today, not only in the Third World countries where it was first reported and studied but also in the developed nations of the West and in the Communist bloc. This is the first book to integrate studies from all three of these settings into a coherent theoretical framework.

NEW SEEDS AND POOR PEOPLE

Michael Lipton

with Richard Longhurst

"Modern varieties" of cereals developed through plant genetics mean more employment, cheaper food, and less risk for third world farmers. Yet the gains bring new problems—from displaced workers to reduced crop diversity. Concluding that technical breakthroughs alone won't solve deep-rooted social problems, the authors call for new policies and new research priorities.

BRAZIL IN TRANSITION

Democratizing Brazil

Problems of Transition and Consolidation

Edited by ALFRED STEPAN

The peaceful transfer of power to a civilian president in Brazil in March 1985 marked the end of one of Latin America's most enduring and—until the economic crisis of the 1980s—economically dynamic military regimes. In this companion volume to the classic Authoritarian Brazil, a distinguished group of Brazilian and American scholars—Albert Fishlow, Fernando Henrique Cardoso, and Thomas Skidmore among them—analyzes the tortuous, decade-long process, known as abertura, by which dictatorship gave way to civilian rule. As the first volume on Brazil to address the crucial theoretical and practical questions of both democratic transition and consolidation, Democratizing Brazil focuses specifically on the severe problems that the country now faces as a fledgling democracy.

DRUG CONTROL IN THE AMERICAS REVISED EDITION

WILLIAM O. WALKER III

In this study, based on extensive documentary research, Professor Walker examines the origins and development of inter-American drug control from World War I to the present. He finds that the goal of curtailing the flow of drugs into this country from Latin America, whether in the 1930s or the 1980s, has largely eluded United States officials. 336 pp., 5 maps
