

Reason and Authority

The Thought of William Chillingworth

ROBERT R. ORR

The author uses unpublished manuscript material to illuminate Chillingworth's conversion first to the Roman Communion, then back to the Church of England. The book is both an intellectual biography and an essay in the history of ideas. 40s net

Past, Present and Future

ARTHUR PRIOR

This book surveys and extends work that has been done in the past two years on 'tense logic'. The author discusses the logic of successive total world-states, of measured temporal intervals, of predetermination and post-determination, and of objects which begin and cease to be. 38s net

Explanation and Human Action

A. R. LOUCH

Human action is to be explained by seeing that an action is undertaken to accomplish a task or achieve a goal. Such explanation is found in the particular case, and not by reference to general theories. Consequently the behavioural scientist's hopes for a general theory of human action are misconceived.

Identity and Spatio-Temporal Continuity

DAVID WIGGINS

The author examines the notion of spatio-temporal continuity for its own sake, dwelling first on the purely formal requirements to be satisfied by any identity-criterion and then on their effective satisfaction by our conception of the continuity of a material body of any given sort. 631 10370 8

KANT

Philosophical Correspondence
1759-99

edited and translated by

Arnulf Zweig

Kant was a reluctant letter writer, who wrote not for posterity but to explain his views to his friends. For this reason, his letters provide a wealth of information about his life and attitudes, and the growth of his philosophy. Virtually all of his letters dealing with philosophy are now translated into English for the first time. They touch on many aspects of his life, making it possible to trace the development of his thought from the first philosophical stirrings to later attempts to meet the objections of his critics and erstwhile disciples. Also included for their historical interest are letters from Kant's friends discussing events in Berlin after the death of Frederick the Great; intimate letters to his physician and confidant; Marcus Herz; and letters of advice and solace to Maria Herbert. 56s. net

THE HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY

by Emile Bréhier
Volume 5
The Eighteenth Century

translated by

Wade Baskin

In the fifth part of Bréhier's monumental History of Philosophy to appear in English translation the author traces eighteenth-century philosophical speculation in France, England and Germany. An introductory chapter on Newton's physics and Locke's metaphysics is followed by chapters on the English deists and on Berkeley, Christian Wolff, Giambattista Vico, and Montesquieu. The second section covers the early 'Enlightenment' thinkers—Condillac, David Hume and Adam Smith, Vauvenargues, Voltaire and Rousseau. In the final section, Bréhier surveys the leading proponents of a return to sentiment and immediate intuition—Lessing, Herder, and others—and concludes with an illuminating analysis of Kantian Criticism. 59s. 6d. net
