Contributors

Navid Bargrizen is a Ph.D. candidate in historical musicology at University of Florida. He has presented papers on intersections of music, technology, and philosophy in the music of Harry Partch, Manfred Stahnke, and Mozart at national and international conferences, including those of the Society for American Music and German Studies Association. His articles, interviews, and papers are published in Müzik-Bilim Dergisi, The Journal of Musicology, Newsletter of the Society of Composers, Inc., and proceedings of conferences in Berlin and Istanbul.

John Behling teaches courses on ethnomusicology, jazz, and popular music at Columbia College and the University of Illinois. He has written on jazz in Chicago, Sammy Davis, Jr., improvisation, and the history of jazz education. He is also a prominent Chicago guitarist and has made recordings of jazz, Celtic, and Brazilian music.

Geoffrey Block is Distinguished Professor of Music at the University of Puget Sound. He has published widely on Charles Ives, American musical theater, Beethoven, and Schubert and is the author of Ives: "Concord" Sonata (Cambridge University Press, 1996); Enchanted Evenings: The Broadway Musical from "Show Boat" to Sondheim and Lloyd Webber (Oxford University Press, 1997; 2nd ed. 2009); and Richard Rodgers (Yale University Press, 2003). He is also the general editor of the Yale Broadway Masters and series editor of Oxford's Broadway Legacies.

William Cheng is an assistant professor of music at Dartmouth College. He is the author of Sound Play: Video Games and the Musical Imagination (2014); and Just Vibrations: The Purpose of Sounding Good (2016). His current book projects include All the Beautiful Musicians (Oxford); Touching Pitch: Dirt, Debt, Color (Michigan); and Queering the Field: Sounding Out Ethnomusicology (Oxford, coedited with Gregory Melchor-Barz). He has written for the Journal of the American Musicological Society, Ethnomusicology, Ethnomusicology Review, Cambridge Opera Journal, 19th-Century Music, and Critical Inquiry, along with Slate, the Washington Post, Huffington Post, Time, Pacific Standard, and Musicology Now.

Benjamin Givan is an associate professor of music at Skidmore College and the author of The Music of Django Reinhardt (2010). He teaches courses in jazz history, twentieth- and twenty-first-century music history, film music, music and philosophy, and post-tonal theory. His jazz scholarship includes another article on Mimi Perrin, which appeared in American Music in 2016.

Lauron Kehrer is a Ph.D. candidate in musicology at the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester. Her current research examines the intersections of race, gender, and sexuality in contemporary American hip hop. Her work has appeared in American Music, the Journal of the Society for American Music, and Inside Higher Ed. She has presented her research at meetings of the American Musicological Society, Society for American Music, and Society for Ethnomusicology.

Jessica Payette is an associate professor of music at Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan. She specializes in twentieth- and twenty-first century music and has published articles on opera in fin-de-siècle Vienna, monodramatic vocal works, and ballet in the German Democratic Republic.

John Pippen is an adjunct professor of music at Colorado State University, where he teaches undergraduate and graduate courses. His primary research has been an extended ethnographic study of labor and aesthetics in the Chicago new music scene. Additional projects include a chapter in the forthcoming Oxford Handbook of Spectral Music.

Laura Moore Pruett is an associate professor of music at Merrimack College in North Andover, Massachusetts, where she teaches courses in music history, theory, and appreciation. Her publications, which focus mainly on nineteenth-century American music, include an article on sentimentality in the works of Louis Moreau Gottschalk in 19th-Century Music and several articles in the Grove Dictionary of American Music, second edition. Her edition of Gottschalk's two symphonies will be published in A-R Editions' series Music of the United States of America.

Colleen Renihan is an assistant professor at the Dan School of Drama and Music, Queen's University. Her research is focused on issues of memory, historiography, and temporality in American and Canadian twentieth- and twenty-first century opera. Her work has appeared in The Journal of the Society for American Music, Twentieth-Century Music, and Music, Sound, and the Moving Image. She is currently at work on a book manuscript focused on American historically based opera.

Eric Smialek earned his Ph.D. in musicology at McGill University with a dissertation on genre and expression in extreme metal music. His research combines close music analysis with the discourses of fans and critics. Smialek is a three-time winner of IASPM-Canada's Peter Narvaez Student Paper Prize. In addition to chapters in Global Metal Music and Culture (Routledge 2016) and the Routledge Companion to Music Analysis, he has forthcoming articles on Sigur Rós, Meshuggah, Katy Perry, Southern Soul, and music in hockey broadcasts.

Elizabeth A. Wells earned her doctorate in musicology at the Eastman School of Music and is a professor and the Pickard-Bell Chair of Music at Mount Allison University in Sackville, New Brunswick. She is a 3M National Teaching Fellow and co-founder of the International Federation of National Teaching Fellows. Her book on West Side Story was published in 2011, and her research interests include twentieth-century opera, musical theater, and the scholarship of teaching and learning.

Mariana Whitmer is Executive Director of the Society for American Music and a part-time faculty member at the University of Pittsburgh, where she teaches a course on film music. She has consulted for several years on Voices Across Time: Teaching American History Through Song, a joint project of the University and the Society, which uses songs (and their biographies) to enhance social studies curricula in K-12 classrooms.

Brian F. Wright is a Ph.D. candidate at Case Western Reserve University and a temporary assistant professor of music at Fairmont State University. His research focuses on the cultural history of the electric bass in jazz, rock, and rhythm 'n' blues, exploring issues such as social stigma, amateur music making, and historiography.
