 THE FIRST FOUR VOLUMES IN THE
VANDERBILT INSTITUTE OF MESOAMERICAN ARCHAEOLOGY
 - Series -
 Edited by Arthur A. Demarest

Based on the dramatic excavations of Maya sites featured in publications such as National Geographic and the New York Times, these initial volumes in an anticipated twenty-volume series document years of fieldwork and engage the major controversies concerning the nature of Maya society and its collapse. The series argues for the importance of a regional, multidisciplinary approach.

Diet, Health, and Status among the Pasión Maya

A Reappraisal of the Collapse

Lori E. Wright

This volume presents the data, analyses, and interpretation of a wide range of human osteological and burial data. For bioarchaeologists, this work sets a new standard in breadth and depth of osteological study. For Pre-Columbian scholars in general, it provides new insights into the environmental and biological issues involved in the debate on the end of the Classic period of Maya civilization.

Warfare and the Fall of a Fortified Center

Archaeological Investigations at Aguateca

Takeshi Inomata

This volume presents for the first time the detailed data and dramatic findings of Inomata's investigations of this Classic period second capital of the ancient Maya Petexbatun kingdom. As widely discussed in journals and the media, the autonomous Aguateca subproject of the Vanderbilt Petexbatun research recovered remarkable new evidence on the violent end of a great Maya center.

The Petexbatun Regional Archaeological Project

A Multidisciplinary Study of the Collapse of a Classic Maya Kingdom

Arthur A. Demarest

This overview and introduction to the multi-volume Petexbatun project series describes the objectives, structure, personnel, and major findings of the seven-year multidisciplinary investigation. In its conclusions, this first of the Petexbatun volumes provides answers to some long-standing questions about the "Classic Maya collapse," as well as a new, preliminary culture-history of the abandonment, decline, or transformation of the Classic Maya kingdoms of the western Petén.
