‘ Littérature comparée, appliquée aux pays en voie de développement ’

M. ALBERT GÉRARD donne, à la Faculté de Philosophie et Lettres de l'Université de l'État à Liège, un cours de ‘ Littérature comparée, appliquée aux pays en voie de développement ’, qui est actuellement consacré à l'histoire des littératures négro-africaines modernes (c'est-à-dire écrites). Il a été invité à donner ce même enseignement au Département de Littérature Comparée de l'Université Harvard au cours du premier semestre de l'année académique 1966-7. Son programme de recherche vise à établir une histoire générale des littératures africaines modernes, qui couvrirait les œuvres rédigées en langues vernaculaires aussi bien que celles qui sont rédigées dans les langues européennes.
