

A Bibliography for Students of Politics

Compiled by G. B. Bogdanor

This bibliography has been produced by the Oxford University Sub-Faculty of Politics, and was originally intended as a guide for those reading the Politics papers, including Sociology, in the Oxford Honour School of Philosophy, Politics and Economics. But it will also prove useful both to those studying Politics in other universities, and also to those engaged in research. Paper covers 80p

The United Nations as a Political Institution

H. G. Nicholas

For this new edition of his standard work on the United Nations, first published in 1959—when it was hailed as ‘an exceptionally well-informed and readable introduction to the political work of the UN’ (International Affairs)—Professor Nicholas has, as he says, taken ‘fresh stock of the Organization’s development and functioning’ on the occasion of its twenty-fifth anniversary. The contents remain as in the third edition, but the information has been extensively revised and the record brought up to date in the light of events down to June 1970. Fourth edition 90p Oxford Paperbacks

Basic Documents on Human Rights

Edited by Ian Brownlie

The present work is intended to be a handbook of sources on human rights with introductory notes. Particular attention has been paid to major international agreements, regional developments, the work of the International Labour Organization, the concept of equality, and the economic foundations of human rights. £3.50 paper covers £1.75

The Government and Politics of Ireland

Basil Chubb

With an historical introduction by David Thornley

In addition to describing Ireland’s major political institutions and tentatively characterizing the country’s political culture, the book presents up-to-date information on elections, political participation, interest group activity, the mass media, and the socio-economic status of politicians and the politically active. 5 figures 10 maps £3.50

Voting and Collective Choice

Some Aspects of the Theory of Group Decision Making

PRASANTA K. PATTANAİK

How does a society pass from individual preferences to arrive at a social choice? Dr Pattanaik examines this question using Kenneth Arrow's classic work, Social Choice and Individual Values, as a starting point, analyzing it and commenting upon it. Dr Pattanaik applies mathematical methods to the problems of social science, looking at the logical problems of formulating necessary and sufficient conditions for the existence of a social choice function and of a complete social ordering.

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN HISTORY AND THEORY OF POLITICS

The Impact of Labour 1920-1924

The Beginning of Modern British Politics

MAURICE COWLING

The Labour triumph at the General Election of 1924 established the Labour-Conservative polarization which has persisted since. This is primarily an account of politicians of this period and their reactions to one another as some ten groups of Liberals and Conservatives all tried to make themselves leader of a major party of 'resistance to Labour'. 'Maurice Cowling's new study is refreshing in that he has a deliberate and carefully argued point to make . . . all those who are seriously interested in modern British politics must regard his book as a very significant contribution.'

Lancashire and the New Liberalism

P. F. CLARKE

In this study of the liberal revival in Lancashire, the cockpit of Edwardian elections, Dr Clarke suggests that the Liberal Party, far from being played out as orthodox theory suggests, was actually a vital and representative political element. He supports his ideas with voting studies of the Northwest covering the period 1885-1910. ' . . . a new view, powerfully argued and well-documented.'

The Middle East Supply Centre

By Martin W. Wilmington

Edited by Laurence Evans

Foreword by Commander Sir Robert Jackson

During World War II, the United States and the United Kingdom co-operated in contributing to the successful operation of a regional organization which indisputably saved the Middle East for the Allied cause and which, if perpetuated, might have formed the basis for regional peace and stability. This was the Middle East Supply Centre, whose creation, evolution, responsibilities, and activities are described analytically in this volume.

Beyond the author's narrative and analysis of the Centre's wartime logistical activities, he has placed the whole enterprise in a far larger setting: Anglo-American collaboration; the imperious influence of world powers; the aspirations of under-developed nations; and the growth in the area of "economic regionalism."

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. All contributions should be sent to: The Editor, British Journal of Political Science, University of Essex, Colchester, Essex.

2. Articles submitted to the journal should in general be between 5,000 and 12,000 words long, though articles outside these limits will be acceptable if there is some good reason for their exceptional length or brevity. Articles in two or more parts may be accepted provided each part is independently intelligible.

3. Notes are welcome and every effort will be made to publish them quickly. A note should contain a body of original information, a new method for doing something or a new idea (speculation, argument, proof, etc.) presented in a brief and unadorned form without any inessential commentary. Only exceptionally will notes over two thousand words in length be accepted.

4. It is hoped to carry in each issue, where possible, an article of some 10,000 words reviewing the state of some area of the discipline. Review articles submitted without prior consultation will be considered, but in their own interest contributors would be well advised not to prepare a review article specially for the journal without first discussing the subject with the editor.

5. Letters, criticisms of articles, and similar contributions will be considered for early publication, especially if they are brief—say under 1,000 words.

6. Authors of articles and review articles receive twenty-five free offprints. Additional copies may be bought if ordered at proof stage.

7. Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, or is not being considered for publication elsewhere. In the interests of authors, copyright is normally assigned to the Cambridge University Press.

8. Contributions intended for publication should, if possible, be submitted IN DUPLICATE. They must be typed and reproduced in any clearly legible form. The preferred size of paper is A4 ( $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11\frac{1}{2}$  in) but quarto ( $8 \times 10$  in) or the US standard size ( $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$  in) will also be accepted.

9. The entire material, including quotations, footnotes, appendices, etc., should be double spaced with left-hand margins of at least  $1\frac{1}{2}$  in. The preferred treatment of footnotes is that they should be numbered consecutively in the text and typed all together at the end, beginning on a fresh page, but manuscripts employing other methods of arranging footnotes will not be rejected simply on those grounds.

10. References to books and articles should include the following details: in the case of books, the full title, place of publication, publisher and date; in the case of articles, the author and title, full name of the journal, volume, year and page reference (first and last page). Good articles which contain this bibliographical information will be accepted, even if they do not follow the journal's own arrangement of the information.

11. Anyone who is contemplating writing an article (etc.) for submission to the journal is urged to follow the style sheet issued by the journal, which covers a number of detailed points of spelling, punctuation, etc. Copies can be obtained by writing to the editor; in addition members of the board and the consultative committee can supply their colleagues with copies.

12. First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the editor, by airmail where appropriate, within ten days of receiving them. The master proof will always be sent direct to the editor by the printer; contributors will receive duplicates.
