GUIDE TO FAR EASTERN NAVIES

Edited by Barry M. Blechman and Robert P. Berman. Foreword by Elmo R. Zumwalt, Jr., Admiral USN (Ret.)

Here is a comprehensive and authoritative description of East Asian navies and their relationships to the Soviet Pacific and U.S. Seventh fleets.

Guide to Far Eastern Navies contains a wealth of timely information, including an examination of the naval significance of the region as a whole and its relation to the U.S. and Soviet fleets.

The navies of China, Japan, Taiwan, the Philippines, and the two Koreas are discussed in individual chapters by experts on each navy. Commander Bruce Swanson, USN, traces the mysterious course of Chinese naval history from the 19th century to the present. Commander James Auer, USN, and Commander Sadao Seno, JMSDF (Ret.), together describe an efficient, technically advanced, but politically handicapped Japanese self-defense force, identifying the strengths and weaknesses of that fleet. The navies of the ever-volatile Koreans are expertly examined by Norman Polmar, and Jeffrey Record explains why the Philippine Navy is principally made up of U.S.-supplied small combatants and amphibious ships. William Durch provides a study in depth of the embattled, aging, but well-maintained navy of Taiwan, which is now turning to countries such as Israel for modern naval armament.

Ships, aircraft, and weapons are tabulated and shown pictorially in a separate section to facilitate comparisons of these important, but little-known navies.

1978/336 pages/illustrated/$32.95.

Fujiwara Teika's Hundred-Poem Sequence of the Shōji Era, 1200

A Complete Translation, with Introduction and Commentary, by Robert H. Brower

In the summer of 1200, Ex-Emperor Go-Toba commissioned a score of poets to compose sets of a hundred poems. To his dismay the 38-year-old Fujiwara Teika was not invited to participate, and it was only after much intercession had been made on his behalf that his name was added to the list. The result was Teika's Hundred-Poem Sequence of the Shōji Era, a composition which contains some of the famous poet's best poems and won for him imperial favor.

Professor Brower first published this introduction and translation in Monumenta Nipponica in 1976. He describes the rivalries behind Teika's nomination, outlines the development of poetic sequences, presents an annotated translation of Teika's hundred poems, and also discusses the holograph fragment which was shown to the public for the first time in the summer of 1977.

MODERN JAPANESE LITERATURE

A CERTAIN WOMAN A NOVEL BY ARISHIMA TAKEO

Translated by Kenneth Strong

A Certain Woman differs strikingly in both style and content from all other serious Japanese fiction of the modern period. In many respects it resembles nineteenth-century European novels: it has a clear plot-line, the treatment is dramatic, and character is portrayed through description of action and feelings, rather than hinted at in the more usual Japanese manner by brief allusion and delicate symbolism. Satsuki Yoko, the novel's heroine, in her revolt against social constraints, is reminiscent of Emma Bovary, Hedda Gabler, and Anna Karenina. Her story has fascinated Japanese readers since 1919; here, the gifted translator Kenneth Strong tells it for Western readers as well. 382 pp. forthcoming

HOWLING AT THE MOON POEMS OF HAGIWARA SAKUTARŌ

Translated by Hiroaki Sato

Hagiwara Sakutarō is regarded as the first truly "modern" poet of Japan. When he published his first anthology in 1917, he stunned his readers with a free verse form that deliberately blended literary diction with everyday language. The resulting effect and imagery were hailed as the epoch-making work of a symbolist poet, and Sakutarō thus placed his indelible mark on the development of modern Japanese poetry. This volume contains the complete translations of two of Sakutarō's outstanding anthologies: "Howling at the Moon" and "Blue Cat," both written at the height of his powers as a poet and deserving full presentation in English. 170 pp. $11.50 / £6.55

"PANIC" AND "THE RUNAWAY" TWO STORIES BY TAKESHI KAIKO

Translated by Charles Dunn

Two thoroughly engaging stories dealing with the struggle of the individual against the overwhelming pressures of the system. "Panic" portrays a young bureaucrat as he tries to steer his own course through a corrupt world of officialdom. "The Runaway," a historical novel, is related by a Chinese peasant, who during the building of the Great Wall was conscripted into a ruthless corvée system. These translations of two of Kaiko's representative works will bring an outstanding modern writer of short stories and essays much-deserved recognition as a writer of universal appeal. "With this translation the English reader is introduced to a major Japanese talent."—Donald Richie, Japan Times. 132 pp. $9.50 / £5.40

Careers in Shanghai

The Social Guidance of Personal Energies in a Developing Chinese City, 1949-1966

Lynn T. White III

White's book is a detailed consideration of ideological versus material incentives in the modernization of a socialist country. Drawing on local newspaper accounts as well as more conventional data, he shows how party elites charged with guiding modernization linked the allocation of jobs, school admissions, household registrations, food rations, and other benefits to the performance of tasks defined as being in the community interest.

A SHORT HISTORY. Charles O. Hucker. By the author of the highly acclaimed China's Imperial Past and written in the same lively style, this work is a distillation of what every general reader and beginning student should know about the history of traditional Chinese civilization. It weaves together chronologically all aspects of Chinese life and culture, broadly surveying general history, socioeconomic organization, political institutions, religion and thought, and art and literature. The result is a concise overview that is both absorbing in itself and basic to a more detailed study of China's long and complex evolution. Cloth, $8.50; paper, $2.95

HISTORY: Fact and Fiction

Biographical Dictionary of Japanese History

Seiichi Iwao, supervising editor
translated by Burton Watson

This authoritative, unique volume, designed for systematic use as a quick reference tool, will be welcomed by specialists in Japanese studies as well as the general reader. Arranged chronologically, its 521 entries cover major historical and religious figures from ancient times to the present. Well-illustrated with maps and diagrams, this is the second in a proposed three-volume series of biographical dictionaries. The first was the critically acclaimed, Biographical Dictionary of Japanese Literature. $39.50

Tun-huang

Yasushi Inoue

translated by Jean Oda Moy

The title of this novel is taken from the name of the desert kingdom on China's westernmost frontier which gained fame in the early part of this century when some 20,000 Buddhist scrolls and manuscripts were discovered in the Thousand Buddha Caves. Around this priceless archaeological find, the author weaves an intricate tale of love, adventure, personal loss, and final spiritual contentment. The date is 1026. This well-known Japanese novelist, was decorated with the Cultural Award in 1976, Tun-huang was awarded the Mainichi Prize in 1960, the year after it was first published.

Farmers in the Forest

Economic Development and Marginal Agriculture in Northern Thailand

edited by Peter Kunstadter,
E. C. Chapman,
and Sanga Sabhasri

Brings together a wide range of studies by forest ecologists, soil scientists, anthropologists, and geographers, who describe the variety of swidden (slash-and-burn cultivation) land-use systems and their effects on soil and forest. They point to conflicts between traditional land use and land tenure and the modern legal and administrative constraints within which these farming systems must operate.

CHAIYO!

King Vajiravudh and the Development of Thai Nationalism

by Walter F. Vella, assisted by Dorothy Vella

Chaiyo! will add greatly to an understanding of the emergence of modern Thailand. It is also an important addition to studies of the impact of the West and the emergence of nationalism in Asia as a whole during the period of World War I. King Vajiravudh's role, although recognized, has never before been thoroughly researched. The findings will be of value to all those interested in the development of Asia.
