Oxford Monographs in International Law

Series Editor: IAN BROWNLIE, QC, DCL, FBA, Chichele Professor of Public International Law in the University of Oxford and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford

This new series of monographs will make available important and original research on all aspects of public international law. Topics which will be given particular prominence are those which, while of interest to the academic lawyer, also have important bearing on issues which touch the actual conduct of international relations. The series is intended to be wide in scope and will include the history and philosophical foundations of international law.

International Legal Structure

This work examines contemporary public international law doctrines and arguments in treatise form. It considers each of the major topics of public international law: the source and power of international law, the international legal process and the conventional laws of force and peace. The laws of custom, treaty, statehood, recognition, jurisdiction, sovereign immunity, and state responsibility are given special attention. The work concludes with a look at the new U.N. Convention on the Law of international affairs.

By reading exemplary cases and scholarly arguments, the book traces patterns and strategies of rhetoric which recur in a variety of different doctrinal areas. This focus on rhetorical and doctrinal structure distinguishes the work from other, similarly comprehensive books about public international law. This book challenges and rejects the questions usually asked by public international law grounded in the doctrines and argument of the field itself.

The critical stance and rhetorical method developed in this work show the influence of French structuralism and post-structuralism, German critical theory and the North American »critical legal studies« school.

Essential Reference Tools

INTER-AMERICAN YEARBOOK ON HUMAN RIGHTS

Volume 1

edited by The Organization of American States

1987 1261 pp. ISBN 0-89838-923-2 $215.00

The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights have combined their efforts for the first time to publish this important reference.

Volume 1 offers access to the workings of the inter-American system for the protection of human rights. Along with the American Convention on Human Rights, it includes a chapter on the status of the Convention, reproducing the 1985 declarations of Uruguay and Colombia, accepting the Inter-American Court of Human Rights' compulsory jurisdiction; two special country reports (Chile and Suriname) which reflect the Commission's assessment of the situation of human rights in those countries; the Commission's resolutions; and the resolutions adopted in 1985 by the General Assembly.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS AND THE LAW OF THE SEA

Documentary Yearbook 1985

edited by The Netherlands Institute for the Law of the Sea

1987 650 pp. ISBN 90-247-3488-6 $132.50

This is the first volume in a series of yearbooks meeting the need for an annual publication which systematically reproduces the most important documents related to the law of the sea issued each year by international organizations.

At present, much of this documentation is very difficult to find, scattered as it is over a multitude of sources; it is often printed in limited numbers and not arranged systematically.

International Organizations and the Law of the Sea yearbooks will provide the world community of practitioners and scholars in the international law of the sea greater access to essential documentation. It is certain to become the standard reference tool in the field.

PERSPECTIVES DU DROIT DE LA DELIMITATION MARITIME

by Prosper Weil

Professor of International Law, University of Paris, and Director, Institut des Hautes Etudes Internationales, Paris

This book is devoted to a critical analysis of the law of maritime delimitation, and suggests the directions in which this law is headed.

It is argued that the spatial concepts embodied in the ICJ's Libya/Malta Judgment will have a wide impact on all aspects of maritime delimitation. Most important, the essentially spatial equidistance method should become the starting point of the delimitation process; and the multifaceted corrective equity considerations will ultimately be determined by the territorial concerns of each coastal state to draw maritime boundaries that provide a sufficiently broad area of maritime jurisdiction.

STATE IMMUNITY: SOME RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

Christoph Schreuer

Professor of International Law, University of Salzburg

Suits against States and State-owned corporations in foreign courts are a major feature of international transactions and activities. In recent years treaties, national legislation and numerous judicial decisions have led to significant development in this important area of the law.

This book examines the principal international and national aspects of these new features. It will be of considerable interest to practitioners dealing with transnational cases, to government officials, to those interested in the machinery of international trade and to scholars of international law.

Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1980

The Department of State's Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1980 will be available after May 1 at the U.S. Government Printing Office (xxx, 1134 pp.). The eighth in the annual series, the 1980 Digest includes the final 3 weeks of President Carter's administration in January 1981, and indicates developments in certain fields subsequent to the period of coverage.

Describing legal, diplomatic and other responses by the United States to Iran's continuing, lawless detention of the American hostages captured in 1979, the volume conveys the totality of the U.S. response to the crisis. It sets out actions undertaken by the President and the executive branch, including appearances by the U.S. Government in domestic litigation and before the International Court of Justice. It summarizes the negotiations that led to the resolution of the crisis, under the catalytic effect of an impending change in U.S. Presidents, and explains the legal issues considered in formulating the Algiers Declarations, including the establishment of the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal at The Hague.

The 1980 Digest details measures undertaken to curb foreign government-sponsored (Libyan) terrorism within the United States, which culminated in the closing of the Libyan People's Bureau in Washington. In another area involving Libya, the Digest discusses the U.S. Government's support, amicus, in judicial proceedings brought by an American corporate claimant to enforce a foreign arbitral award obtained against Libya (the LIAMCO case).

Other government participation in domestic litigation involved interpretations of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act and the act of state doctrine, as well as various provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act. In regard to the latter, the United States succeeded in revoking the naturalization of a former Nazi death camp guard; this resulted in his deportation and in a number of successful similar efforts. A challenge to the constitutionality of that Act's legislative veto provision, which would have required deportation of an East Indian individual seeking adjustment of status, was also successful (the Chadha case).

The volume outlines the legal and other problems presented by the 1980 Mariel boatlift from Cuba and by the waves of illegal migrants from Haiti. It also relates government efforts to exclude common crimes of violence from the political offense exception to extradition, initially in arguments before U.S. extradition magistrates and courts (and, finally, through renegotiation of key extradition treaty provisions).

Lastly, the 1980 Digest traces the enlargement of the U.S. role in Middle East peacekeeping, which was to result in the establishment of the Multinational Force and Observers.
