
Editorial

Among the ways in which this journal helps its readers is by providing information on forthcoming events. It is hoped that the Calendar section, which forms the last section of each issue, can be expanded to make it more comprehensive and therefore more useful. To assist in achieving this objective I would like to hear from those who are arranging conferences and meetings of a size and kind likely to be of interest to poultry scientists and those in the poultry industry in other countries.

The promotion of education and training is an important objective of the World's Poultry Science Association. To help intending students, university and college courses relating more or less directly to poultry production and/or poultry science will be included in the Calendar section. Provided place are likely to be available for students from other countries, there would be obvious benefits if those concerned with the planning of such courses could let me have details for inclusion in the journal.
