

Fred H. Winkler has been appointed instructor in history and political science at the University of Idaho.

George Wolf is on leave from the University of Florida during 1955-56 to complete his doctorate at the University of North Carolina under a Southern Fellowships Fund award.

Julius F. Wolff, Jr. has been promoted to associate professor of political science at the University of Minnesota (Duluth Branch).

Edward J. Woodhouse, who retired in 1954 after 28 years at the University of North Carolina, is now President of the Coastal Carolina College at Conway, South Carolina.

Dr. Woodhouse returned to the University of North Carolina to teach during the summer session, 1955.

Leon W. Wolcott is serving as visiting professor of government at the University of New Mexico during the first semester of 1955-56.

Joseph J. Zasloff, assistant professor of political science at the University of Pittsburgh, taught in the European Program of the University of Maryland College of Special and Continuation Studies.

Janusz K. Zawodny, formerly of Stanford University, has been appointed instructor in the department of politics at Princeton University for the academic year 1955-56.

IN MEMORIAM

J. Dayton Voorhees, associate professor of Politics Emeritus of Princeton University, died of a heart seizure September 28th. A graduate of Princeton in 1905, Mr. Voorhees returned nine years later for an A.M. Meantime, having been admitted to the Bar in 1908, he had practiced law in Camden, his birthplace. In 1917, however, he joined the Air Service, from which in 1919 he was mustered out a captain. This same year he again returned to Princeton, to accept an appointment as instructor in the tripod department of history, politics and economics. In 1922 he was made assistant professor of politics; in 1929, associate professor.

Most of Professor Voorhees' teaching was done in jurisprudence and municipal government. In the latter subject, in particular, he contrived to blend practice and teaching with notable success, and with marked benefit to his students and to the Borough of Princeton. At the time of his death he was just completing his 15th year as Borough Councilman, in which capacity he served at various times as Acting Mayor, President of the Council, and Police Commissioner, earning in all roles the esteem and affection of his constituents.

While not a contributor to the literature of his field, he read widely in it, as well as in related fields. Thanks to his breadth of information and practical experience, and to charm of personality, his success in the class room was outstanding. Perhaps his greatest contribution, however, to the department was the confidence which he instilled in his younger colleagues by his unassuming and direct approach to the problems they soon learned to bring to him. And by all who knew him he was admired as a master of good talk, sensible, unhackneyed, humorous. His loss will be felt deeply throughout the Princeton community—by fellow townsmen, classmates, former students, and by those with whom he shared for many years the Sisyphean labors of college teaching.—EDWARD S. CORWIN.