
The Background of the New Testament and its Eschatology

EDITORS: W. D. DAVIES & D. DAUBE

Studies in honour of Dr C. H. Dodd, now reissued. The first essays survey the present state of research on the background of the New Testament. The second group deal with the special problem of its eschatology. 60s. net

The Authentic Writings of Ignatius

MILTON PERRY BROWN

An evaluation of different linguistic tests used by New Testament critics when considering questions of authorship and authenticity. Dr Brown takes thirteen letters written by Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, seven of which are held to be genuine and six spurious. These letters have been judged by different criteria which include vocabulary, diction, sentence structure and figures of speech. Dr Brown shows clearly which tests he thinks are valuable and which are less so. His findings will be valuable for the future of New Testament criticism. Duke University Press. 60s. net

Essays on New Testament Themes

ERNST KÄSEMANN

Eight of the author's most important contributions are here translated. 'The Problem of the Historical Jesus' and 'Is the Gospel objective?' have become landmarks in the post-Bultmann development of N.T. studies. Dr Käsemann is a Professor in the University of Tübingen.

Studies of the Historical Jesus

ERNST FUCHS

Dr Fuchs is Dr Bultmann's successor as Professor of New Testament in the University of Marburg, but his approach is significantly different. He believes that we can recover much of the 'Jesus of history'—but also that the theologian's supreme task now is to interpret the Gospel of Jesus in a very different world.
