Plainsong & Medieval Music

The Journal of the Plainsong and Mediaeval Music Society

New for 1992, Plainsong & Medieval Music will be published twice a year by Cambridge University Press in association with the Plainsong and Mediaeval Music Society.

Plainsong & Medieval Music covers the whole field of plainchant and medieval music, monophonic and polyphonic, in both East and West, and will embrace the liturgical chant of any period. The journal will also publish original research articles, reviews of the most important recent publications, a section devoted to recordings and a comprehensive bibliography of chant.

Published in April and October at £18 for individuals; £32 for institutions; airmail is £12 per year extra (ISSN 0961-1371).

The return of contributions cannot be guaranteed unless return postage is provided.

Manuscripts should be double spaced throughout (including footnotes, etc.) and should be typed on one side of the paper with ample margins. Contributors with word processors are requested to underline rather than use an italic font, and to avoid justification of right margins, automatic hyphenation and bold face type.

Footnotes should be numbered consecutively and be typed, double spaced, on separate pages at the end. Musical examples, figures, tables, etc. should also be supplied on separate sheets.

Contributors who wish to reproduce photographs should provide good black and white prints, full details of the source and the full address of the copyright holder if this differs. Photographs will not normally be considered unless they are an intrinsic part of the contribution, and their inclusion will always be at the discretion of the editors. The full address of the copyright holder should also be provided for any other material used in which the contributor does not hold copyright.

Punctuation should follow standard British practice. Single quotation marks should be used with double reserved for quotations within quotations. Punctuation that is not part of the quoted material should be outside closing quotation marks, as should footnote indicators. Longer quotations should be indented left without quotation marks and double spaced. Prose citations should be in English unless the original is of particular importance, unpublished or inaccessible, in which case the original should be followed by a translation in square brackets. Verse citations should be in the original language followed by a prose translation in square brackets.

Dates should be on the following model: c. 1740, 1840s, 5 February 1943. References should be to: Act I scene 2, op. 1 no. 2 in E major, Ex. 12 and Exx. 12–14, Fig. 3 and Figs. 6–9, motif(s) and leitmotif(s). For precise identification of pitch, use this system:

Sample footnotes (do not abbreviate journal titles):

First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the editors an address through which they can be reached without delay and are able to return the corrected proofs, by airmail where necessary, within three days of receipt.

New Theatre Quarterly

Edited by: CLIVE BARKER, Department of Theatre Studies, University of Warwick
& SIMON TRUSSLER, Goldsmiths' College, University of London

New Theatre Quarterly has established itself as a leading journal in the field of theatre studies. It provides a vital international forum where theatrical scholarship and practice can meet, and where prevailing dramatic assumptions can be subjected to vigorous critical questioning. With articles by important writers, NTQ will keep you informed on all aspects of theatre studies. Its news, debate and analysis keep you in touch with what is happening in the theatre at the moment.

NTQ is aimed at:

- teachers and students in schools and colleges
- national and regional arts authorities, arts administrators
- actors, playwrights, critics and directors
- theatre-goers worldwide who need to keep in touch with the affairs of world drama

NTQ follows four independent premises: that theatre needs a philosophy; that theatre studies need methodology; that criticism needs a language; and that theatre history has a contemporary relevance.

Subscription Information: New Theatre Quarterly is published in February, May, August and November. ISSN 0266-464X. Volume 8 in 1992, £37 for institutions; £21 for individuals; airmail £12 per year extra
