THE CHARACTER OF ENGLAND

Edited by SIR ERNEST BARKER

Fully illustrated 30s. net

This book is the work of a number of contributors, writing under the general editorship of Sir Ernest Barker. It is designed to continue and fulfil the policy by which the Oxford University Press has already published works on Shakespeare's England, Johnson's England, and Early Victorian England; but it has the wider and deeper purpose of giving a view of the general character of England, not so much at a point of time (though the present time naturally occupies the foreground), as in the whole course of its permanent and long-term operation. While the Present thus stands in the foreground, due account has also been given to the living Past; and while the theme is the character and spirit of contemporary England, history and antiquity have also entered, not, however for their own sake, but rather as explaining the present. The aim of the book is to describe the spirit, or 'character' of England, rather than all the varied material in which that spirit works.

The book, with its distinctive illustrations, forms in a sense a monument to the England of these days. It finds room for what is curious, eccentric, or even comical (otherwise it would not be true to the character of England), without forgetting the grave, the meditative, and even the melancholy. Not only are the great and famous drawn into evidence as the basis of the verdict; but the general run of ordinary behaviour, and the simple tastes of the mass of the people, form the basis of judgement. The ordinary Englishman thus has his place in most of the chapters.

FELLOW OF ALL SOULS, OXFORD

Author of SIR RICHARD GRENVILLE OF THE 'REVENGE'

'I am reading it with the very greatest interest....The book is not only extremely interesting about Cornwall in particular, but it is a geographical section of the whole social history of England, which illustrates in a convincing and instructive way the real course of the Reformation as it affected English society.'

An Exposition of Empire

C. E. CARRINGTON

This is No. 28 of the Current Problems Series. The preface runs: 'When Seeley wrote in 1883 that the English seemed to have "conquered and peopled half the world in a fit of absence of mind", he was referring, not to the method of expansion, but to the indifference displayed towards it by the educated classes....After reading Sir Ernest Barker's book, Ideas and Ideals of the British Empire, I was stimulated to attempt an expansion of his theme by sketching the historical background to some current problems of the Commonwealth. Almost everything written here is controversial; and, if I provoke discussion, I have fulfilled my purpose.'
