

to compare 'rich' and 'poor' countries, why are Japan and other South East Asian countries included and Latin American countries excluded? Such a category cannot impart meaningful information.

Starting from this grave category error, the result is an article full of content errors. Lack of affective expression may be true in Japanese culture but is not true of Middle Eastern culture. Many traditional Asian medical systems fully recognise the link between mind and body. Bullying may be a problem in some schools, but certainly not more so than in the West. Suicide rates in the young are as variable between Afro-Asian countries as they are in the West. Parents not listening to children is not a consequence of culture and can happen in any culture.

Author's reply: The article was an attempt to record the observations and anxieties about some of the pressures that were brought to my attention by colleagues in mental health, paediatricians and educationalists in the course of overseas attachments since 1978. The article is unscientific and my first hand experience of children under these pressures is very limited. It was the recurrence of the theme in India, Pakistan and Thailand in particular that moved me to write.

Dr Timimi infers that I (or my subconscious) believe that Western parents know how to do all the right things by their children. I would point out that I allude to pressurising in worldwide and British contexts in the first paragraph. Dr Timimi is wrong in suggesting that I invoke Western child psychiatry to solve this problem. All the ideas I mention are from the recommendations of the 1978 WHO report Child Mental Health and Psychosocial Development. This excellent document is antipathetic to expensive Western style child psychiatric services and favours the development of basic mental health skills and primary care levels.

Thirteen years ago I wrote in the Indian Journal of Psychiatry that "the adoption of Western child psychiatric practices will need to be watched very carefully. Child Psychiatry must be related to society and culture – possibly more so than in any other specialism". I still hold this view.

Procedures for Election to the Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians of London

Sir: I am writing to correct a statement regarding the mode of election to the Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians of London. In his recent article in the Psychiatric Bulletin (1996, 20, 185–187) your Registrar indicated that election to our Fellowship was 'almost an automatic entitlement'. This is not the case. Although all Physicians working in England and Wales who have been in a Consultant post for three years or more are automatically considered, they are by no means automatically elected; indeed the overall success rate, which includes this group as well as Members who are not Physicians or work in other countries, runs at approximately 50%. In order to be elected, a candidate has to satisfy one or more defined criteria in addition to the 'good standing and reasonable seniority' suggested in your article. We regard our Fellowship as a mark of distinction, as indeed it is so described in our Bye-laws. I hope that this brief explanation will clarify the situation for your readers.

Parole board guidelines

Sir: I refer to the article "Parole board guidelines" in the College section of the May 1996 issue of Psychiatric Bulletin (20, 315–316). I decided to put these guidelines into practice recently when preparing a report on a life sentence prisoner. When the typed report came back for signature the Senior Medical Officer of the prison pointed out that the report did not conform to the official guidelines and so he had inserted headings at intervals through the report in order to make my report match his guidelines. He gave me a copy of the headings which are required to be used in reports and they are as follows:

- (1) knowledge of the prisoner – including your qualifications
- (2) attitude to the offence
- (3) insight into offence related behavioural problem
- (4) behaviour in prison
- (5) external support
- (6) assessment of suitability for release
- (7) any other comments
- (8) assessment for Grendon.

Furthermore, he showed me a memorandum from the "Lifer Liaison Officer" which indicated: "any reports submitted which do not comply with the standard format as indicated in Annexe C will
