

University, "Political Ambition"

Theresa Marchant-Shapiro, Union College, "With a Finger to the Wind: Primary Candidates' Strategic Use of Issues"

Jeffrey Ian Ross, University of Lethbridge, "The Other Side of the Big Six: Politics and Control of Police Violence in Major American Cities"

Richard Stahler-Sholk, Pitzer College, "Debt, Adjustment, and Organized Labor: Problems of Democratization in Nicaragua"

Yuan Ting, Oakland University, "An Analysis of the Impact of AFDC Benefit Levels on the Interstate Migration of AFDC Recipients"

Daniel Wirls, University of California-Santa Cruz, "Explaining Senate Elections: The Problems of Mixed-Party Delegations"

Voytek Zubek, University of Alabama-Birmingham, "The Crystallization of Poland's Party System"

1992 Ralph Bunche Summer Institute

Twenty-five juniors who have demonstrated interest and potential in the field of political science participated in the seventh annual Ralph Bunche APSA Summer Institute in Political Science for Black Students, held June 8-July 18 in Atlanta, Georgia.

The Institute was conducted by a consortium consisting of Spelman College, Morehouse College, Georgia State University, Clark-Atlanta University and Emory University. Lois Moreland of Spelman College was director of the 1992 institute. Roger Miller of Georgia State, Eleanor Main and Micheal Giles of Emory University, Tobe Johnson of Morehouse College, and William Boone of Clark-Atlanta University were coordinators of their respective campuses.

The students selected as institute participants came from diverse universities and colleges from 18 different states and the District of Columbia.

Craig M. Brodhead, State University of New York

Ernescia S. Coles, University of Virginia

Amy D. Donaldson, University of Alabama

Melissa N. Doss, Trenton State College

Jared K. Ellison, Tuskegee University

James R. Freeman, University of California, Santa Barbara

David A. Glass, Lock Haven University

Erika L. Gordon, Spelman College

Thomasine Gore, St. Augustine College

Julian Guillroy, Southern University

Bridget L. Hardaway, West Georgia College

Ayanna B. Hobbs, Drake University

Lisa M. Howard, Bethune-Cookman College

Shawtrice L. Jackson, Cornell University

Robert James, Marquette University

Adrian M. Lewis, Tennessee State University

Eric P. Martin, Baldwin-Wallace College

Eric J. Narcisse, University of Texas

Enette Nelson, University of South Florida

John T. O'Neal, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Nancy M. Pretto, Howard University

Tamara T. Saduddin-Singh, University of South Carolina

Kimberly M. Smith, Tufts University

Fred Shotlow, Jr., Northeastern University

Tamelyn N. Tucker, Hampton University

The six-week program consisted of two graduate level courses taught on two of the campuses of the member institutions. Each participant also completed a research project integrating the two courses. The project involved original, empirical research. Academic credit for successful completion of the courses was awarded by Spelman College.

Students also participated in a series of lectures and workshops. These included: sessions where prominent political scientists discussed their work, a workshop that focused on the Graduate Record Exam, and sessions with recruiters of graduate programs from leading institutions.

The American Political Science Association Policy and Procedures for Permission to Reprint Articles,* 1992

The author of the material to be reprinted is free to give or deny permission, or to impose conditions, fees or a share of royalties. In all cases, the author's permission must be requested. Reprinting material without permission and/or without full attribution is a violation of the Association's code of professional ethics.

The Association, upon receiving a request to reprint an article, informs the requester that a detailed response will be forthcoming after the Association contacts the author or authors. At the same time, the publisher is asked for information about the intended publication, its audience, and whether or not the article will be edited. Upon receipt of this information, the APSA notifies the author of the request, conveys the information provided by the publisher, and asks the author to complete a form, noting whether or not permission is given and the conditions under which it will be given.

A response is then made to the person requesting permission to reprint, informing him/her of the author's wishes. A normal fee specified by authors is $200. (That fee is often shared when more than one author has written an article.) The Association requests a fee of $100 for each article or major portion thereof, for commercial use. These fees are waived for an author seeking permission to reprint his/her own article(s).

The Association also requires that a request be submitted when a publisher seeks to reprint a table or a figure from an article or any segment of an article that is 1,000 words or more in length. The Association will follow the same procedure described above for complete articles. The fee to the APSA for a table, figure, or selection is $50 and the author's fee, if requested, will be $50 to $100. The author will also have the option to request the right to review any selection in which deletions or editorial changes have been made.

*This statement pertains to material to be reprinted in books and bound volumes and not to material to be copied or reproduced for class use. The APSA has a separate policy regarding granting permission to copy articles for classroom use.

The Association's reprint permissions policy reflects the advice of its Committee on Publications and principles specified in its A Guide to Professional Ethics in Political Science.

The American Political Science Association Policy and Procedures for Permission to Copy Articles for Class Assignments, April 1992

The Association wishes to facilitate the classroom use of articles in its journals, The American Political Science Review and PS: Political Science & Politics. The policy and procedures to accomplish this objective consider the needs of faculty and students who use the articles and protect the rights of the authors and the Association which holds the copyrights.

To assure access to articles, there is no fee and no prior clearance requirement for the first 10 copies of an article. In other words, up to, but no more than 10 copies can be made of a single article, either to be distributed directly to individual students in a small class or to be placed on reserve in a library.

The Association's permission to copy and distribute any article(s) must be requested if more than 10 copies will be produced. This applies to the distribution of any article(s) separately, as well as to any article(s) that are included in a special reader or text prepared for a faculty member by a copying service.

The request for permission to copy one or more articles must be accompanied by:

- a full citation of the article(s);
- the title of the course in which it is assigned;
- the name of the course's instructor

- who is assigning the article; and
- the number of copies that are to be made.

The fee for more than 10 copies of an article is 75c for each additional copy. Prepayment of these fees is required unless specific prior arrangements have been made.

The Association will expedite the permissions process to assure that materials can be distributed when students will need them.

The Association's policy on copying articles for class use has been prepared by its Committee on Publications and reflects principles specified in the APSA's A Guide to Professional Ethics in Political Science.

Congressional Fellowship Program Announces 1992-93 Competition Winners

Political Scientists, Reporters Named APSA Congressional Fellows

The American Political Science Association has announced the winners in the national competition for the 1992-93 Congressional Fellowship Program. Following a one-month orientation seminar, Fellows work full time for nine months as professional staff assistants to Members of Congress or congressional committees.

The new Political Science and Journalism Congressional Fellows are:

Denise L. Baer, Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, University of Akron

Mark C. Curtis, Senior News Reporter, WEAR-TV, Pensacola, Florida

Maureen Groppe, Staff Writer, South Bend Tribune, Indiana

Howard A. Isenstein, General Assignment Business Reporter, The New Haven Register, Connecticut

Shannon LeHere, former Deputy Bureau Chief, Westinghouse Broadcasting, Washington, DC

Craig A. Rimmerman, Associate Professor and Chair, Department of Political Science, Hobart and William Smith Colleges

Peter L. Rosegg

Peter L. Rosegg, Editorial Writer, The Honolulu Advertiser
David J. Webber, Associate Professor of Political Science, University of Missouri-Columbia

Federal Executives Win Congressional Fellowships

The Association also selected 22 federal executives as Congressional Fellows for the 1992-93 program and expects to name two more before September.

David J. Webber

PS: Political Science & Politics