

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

AARON BENAVIDES is Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Georgia. He has published in the areas of sociology and history of education and is presently working on a cross-national study of the growth of law school enrollments and lawyers in the post-War period.

STEPHEN DANIELS is a Project Director at the American Bar Foundation in Chicago, IL. A political scientist, he received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. His research deals with the longitudinal dynamics of caseloads in state courts. His work concentrates on the Illinois courts, and he has recently expanded its scope beyond the trial courts to include the Illinois appellate and supreme courts.

PETER HARRIS holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from Yale University. He is a Planning Analyst in the Seattle Department of Community Development.

WAYNE V. MCINTOSH is Assistant Professor of Government and Politics at the University of Maryland, College Park. His general research interest concerns the institutional role of courts in the political system. He is currently working on a project to examine systematically political group activities in the lower federal courts.

RICHARD MORAN is a Fellow in Law and Social History at Harvard Law School and Associate Professor of Sociology at Mount Holyoke College. He is the author of Knowing Right from Wrong: The Insanity Defense of Daniel McNaughtan.

DAVID TYACK is Vida Jacks Professor of Education and Professor of History, Stanford University. He is the author of The One Best System and coauthor of Managers of Virtue and Public Schools in Hard Times. He is currently working with Elisabeth Hansot on a historical study of gender in public education.