NOTE FROM THE EDITORS

Readers of this Journal will by now have noticed that this year's issue carries a new and additional title: The Cambridge Classical Journal. This change does not signal any change in editorial policy. The Journal remains committed to offering its readers the very latest and best of scholarship from across all the classical and related disciplines. The title Proceedings of the Cambridge Philological Society has, however, in some cases, resulted in two misapprehensions: first, that the Journal is narrowly philological; second, that it only carries papers which either have been read at a meeting of the Society in Cambridge or are written by members of the Society. Neither of these is (or, since the late nineteenth century, has been) the case. The editors trust that the new title will make the Journal's long-standing aim clear: to provide an international forum for classics in the broadest sense, welcoming contributions from all scholars in the field.
