

Accelerating Food Production in Sub-Saharan Africa

edited by John W. Mellor, Christopher L. Delgado, and Malcolm J. Blackie

with a foreword by Denis R. Norman

This authoritative work focuses on the interactions of agricultural technology and policy in African development. Most urgently, Africa must produce much of the food necessary to feed its growing population, but agriculture will also be a crucial component in long-run growth and stability through its effects on such factors as employment and foreign exchange.

The book provides a comprehensive assessment of food production in the region, with an approach both diagnostic and prescriptive. Contributors include scholars, researchers, and senior government officials from Africa in addition to Western specialists. They propose specific policy, technology, and research priorities and focus on the key role of government in implementation.

The African Poor

A History

JOHN ILIFFE

This first history of the poor of Sub-Saharan Africa begins in the monasteries of thirteenth-century Ethiopia and ends in the South African resettlement sites of the 1980s. Dr Iliffe investigates what it was like to be poor, how the poor sought to help themselves, and how charitable and governmental institutions provided for them. This is a book for all concerned with the future of Africa.

Democracy and Prebendal Politics

The Rise and Fall of the Second Republic

RICHARD A. JOSEPH

This book examines the relationship between the pattern of party formation and a mode of social, political and economic behaviour that Richard Joseph has termed prebendalism. By exploring political behaviour at all social levels, this volume provides an analysis of the impediments to constitutional theory that is relevant to the study of other African and Third World nations.

African Civilizations

Precolonial Cities and States in Tropical Africa: An Archaeological Perspective

GRAHAM CONNAH

This survey of the precolonial civilizations of the African continent presents the insights and discoveries of modern archaeology. It demonstrates the complexity and range of urban settlements and states which were a feature of precolonial societies in many parts of Africa. The origins of African civilizations, their economies, the structure of their societies and their varied nature are described with a wide selection of illustrations.

Chronicles from Gonja

A Tradition of West African Muslim Historiography

IVOR WILKS, NEHEMIA LEVTZION and BRUCE M. HAIGHT

Historians of the old kingdom of Gonja are fortunate in having access to chronicles of local authorship, written in Arabic. This book traces the development of that historiographical tradition and shows that by the eighteenth century scholars in Gonja were maintaining annals and writing down orally transmitted accounts of their history.

Portrait of an African Village

LANDEG WHITE

This historical portrait of a village in Malawi from 1859 to the present day investigates the concerns of modern African history 'from the inside'. It records the changes in the economy, in custom, in personal and political relationships. The book's heroes are ordinary men and women whose names and voices and contributions to history are resurrected here.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
